New Rules on Foreign Capital

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government is preparing new legislation to screen foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses, Industry Minister Alstair Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday.

The new policy on foreign ownership will be tougher than that contained in a bill proposed by the government in the last Parliament, he said.

The legislation will propose a new type of screening agency under a senior official who will report directly to the minister.

The earlier bill, which died at dissolution, would have required investors to file plans with a registrar in the industry department.

Gillespie said the new bill would be followed by regulations of new foreign investment in co-operation with the provinces and by imposing a licence restriction on transfers of technology into Canada.

He told the House the government would not be rushed into dealing with the foreign ownership issue because of the importance of the issue and later he said it could be several years after establishment of the screening agency before the government starts regulating new investment from outside Canada.

The government indicated in the throne speech last week that a further measure will require the majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies to be Canadians.

Also in the Commons Wednesday, Wally Frith (NDP—Northwest Territories) demanded immediate settlement of aboriginal land claims.

Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who touched on the subject briefly during question period, later said the aboriginal rights controversy poses a difficult matter to decide.

In dealing with it, the government will respect "the rights of the Crown" as they apply to natives but will also take into account native treaty claims.

Frith issued a press release Wednesday saying he will ask the House on Friday to set up a special committee to investigate the matter.

Making his first speech of the session Wednesday,

Nixon Ends Most Curbs On Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon abolished mandatory wage-price controls today, except for the food and health industries, and established a self-administering system keyed to government economic standards.

The surprise move—far more sweeping than had been expected—came as Nixon asked Congress for a one-year extension of his authority to control wages and prices.

The president abolished the pay board and the price commission but retained the cost of living council to manage his Phase 3 economic system.

The new program, which immediately replaces the Phase 2 system established in November 1971, "is self-administering and based on voluntary compliance," the White House said.

No longer will large businesses and labor unions have to get prior government approval for wage or price increases—except in "special problem areas" which Nixon listed as food processing and retailing, and the health industry.

The president also continued the present system of looser mandatory controls over construction wage increases and said the present voluntary effort to keep interest rates down will stay in effect.

But for those industries and unions freed today from mandatory controls, the government retains the right to move in with stiff action to force back unreasonable increases.

Nixon said in a message to Congress that his goal is to reduce the inflation rate to 2.5 per cent or less by the end of 1973. He said his 90-day Phase 1 wage-price freeze and his Phase 2 mandatory controls had cut the inflation rate by nearly half—to about 3.5 per cent.

Nixon's new program abolishes rent controls and is intended to "allow reasonable flexibility" in wage and price increases, Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz told reporters.

Under Phase 3, a new labor-management advisory committee with members including top industrialists and such labor leaders as the AFL-CIO's George Meany will decide whether the current 5.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases should be modified.

That standard remains in effect until the panel meets and the cost of living council decides whether to accept its recommendation.

As a general guide for Phase 3, the White House said price increases should not exceed increases in costs. "Even where costs have increased," a White House summary said, "prices should not be increased if the firm's profit margin exceeds the firm's base-period profit margin."

"Alternatively," the summary added, "a firm may increase prices to reflect increased cost without regard to its profit margin if the firm's average price increases would not exceed 1.5 per cent in a year."

BILL TO EXTEND HANGING BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment for another five years was given first reading today in the Commons.

The bill, the first piece of legislation put before the new Parliament, may come up for debate Friday.

The present bill calls for the same exemptions. It also would do away with the terms capital and non-capital murder.

Logging Fish Kill Protested

They claimed neither the provincial nor federal government have done anything to stop logging companies from filling streams with debris.

About 40 fishermen, some with their families, from Tofino, Ucluelet and other Island points took part in the demonstration.

The group, called the Save Our Salmon Committee, brought in several trucks loaded with some of the debris collected from the up-Island streams, along with specimens of dead fish purported to have died in the struggle to make it upstream.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, acting in the absence of Resources Minister Bob Williams, came out of the buildings to speak to the demonstrators and arranged a meeting with resources and conservation officials.

The most graphic illustration of the mood of the fishermen was a cartoon painted on the side of a truck.

Also attending the meeting are Alberni MLA Robert Skelly and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst.

Hall said he agreed with the fishermen that the problem is "a very serious one." He pointed out that Williams is out of town on vacation, but said Williams was aware of the situation and was taking action on it.

Spokesman for the SOS committee, president Gerald Clarke, said Skelly had told the fishermen that a stop-cutting order had been obtained to keep the logging companies

WOMEN ENTER MOUSTACHE CONTEST

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — Women with moustaches?

In publicizing the contest, organizers invited "everyone" on the base to enter.

When registrations opened Wednesday, 12 wives of servicemen arrived to sign up for the contest.

Their point, one said, was to show that the designation "everyone" was not limited "to the male of the species."

Posties Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings between postal union and government negotiators resumed here today after a union vote that rejected proposals of the workers' national bargaining committee.

The postal workers rejected by 11,217 to 9,479 a negotiating committee recommendation to turn down contract proposals of a conciliation board report.

But the result of the vote, announced Wednsday, was causing interpretation problems.

Some union leaders saw it as an expression of non-confidence in the bargaining committee, while others saw it as a motion of support for basic principles outlined in the conciliation report.

Bill Kidd, education director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the national leaders did not see the vote against the committee recommendation as an expression of non-confidence.

Paris Talks Expand

PARIS (Reuter) — The Vietnam peace talks between United States presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese Politburo member L Duc Tho took on a new dimension today when they were joined by their technical experts working on a ceasefire arrangement.

It was the first time the experts had been present since Kissinger and Tho resumed their discussions last Monday.

Sullivan and Thach and their experts have held almost 50 hours of technical discussions since Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, United States planes kept up heavy raids on the North Vietnamese panhandle today while ground action tapered off in South Vietnam.

NEWS BRIEFS

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Australia might break off diplomatic relations with France if that country continues testing atomic weapons over the Pacific, Australian Attorney-General Lionel Murphy said Wednesday.

April Pension Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Basic old age pensions go up by $3.73 a month in April to $86.61. Single pensioners receiving the maximum guaranteed income supplement will get an April raise of $6.75 to $156.75 a month. Married couples getting the maximum monthly supplement will start getting $12.82 more in April, raising their pension to $297.82 from the current $285 a month.

Chile Sets Rations

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's leftist government said Wednesday night it will ration basic foodstuffs to curb shortages and check a rampant black market.

Skyjack Priority

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang said today his department is giving high priority to drafting legislation dealing with skyjackers.

Most Pilots Said Against Bombing of the North

Times News Services

SAIGON — A B-52 commander who balked at bombing North Vietnam after his 175th mission said today "most pilots do not want to bomb targets in North Vietnam."

But there are some who do, says Capt. Michael Heck.

"One of the pilots made the statement he wanted to hit civilian targets because it made him feel good," says Heck, 30, of Chula Vista, Calif.

Heck said: 'That's the quote of the pilot but this is not typical of all the pilots. Most don't like what they are doing but they follow orders."

He said: "There is enough suffering just in South Vietnam to warrant a discontinuation of the war. But the massive bombing of the North might have been the last straw and I think the step that specifically pushed me over the brink.

"After the ceasefire for Christmas, the massive bombardments resumed and I decided I had to take the step. I reached the decision Dec. 26 and I went to see my wing commander and informed him of my decision. He advised me to seek legal assistance."

Heck, a 1964 alumnus of President Nixon's Quaker alma mater, Whittier College, could get two years in a military prison if a court martial convicts him of failure to obey a general order.

"I can live with that easier than I can with taking part in the war," he said.

A spokesman for the Strategic Air Coommand in Omaha, Neb., said Heck is "the first and only" B-52 crew member to face a charge of "alleged failure to obey an order to fly a combat mission in Southeast Asia."

Heck's decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 10 Oak Leaf clusters and two Presidential Unit Citations.

Another Air Force captain who participated in the B-52 bombing missions has charged the Strategic Air Command with "stupidity and laxity' in planning the raids.

"Either by stupidity or sheer laziness, my crew bombed the same target on the first and third nights of the raids," using the same routes covered by enemy missiles, he said in a letter to Senator Charles Matthias Jr., (R-Md.), his home-state senator.

HECK

Matthias forwarded the letter to Senator John C. Stennis, (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate armed services committee, saying it describes "a disturbing situation in which unnecessary risks were taken." Matthias asked for further investigation.

Matthias' office deleted the names of the captain, who was the plane's navigator, and a sergeant who also signed it.

U.S. Eyes More Canadian Fuel

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the U.S. Federal Power Commission predicted today steadily increasing oil and natural gas imports from Canada, but said the "primary efforts" of the U.S. should be aimed at expanding domestic production.

John Nassikas, an influential policy adviser, told the Senate interior committee on oil and gas imports that more domestic production could involve more intrusions on federal lands, changes in tax and pricing policies and "reappraisal" of federal environmental standards.

While Nassikas was making his forecast, many parts of the United States were still feeling the pinch of a shortage of fuel oil and heating gas.

Schools were closed in many areas, industrial employees were laid off, airline and bus services faced a threat of curtailment, and thermostats were lowered at some military bases.

On Wednesday a senior Nixon administration official told the Senate hearing that Canada and the U.S. have reached a "fair degree of understanding" on one of their major oil-import problems.

However, the official, Gen. George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, gave no indication that a final agreement is near.

Lincoln said that a "series of meetings" was held between November, 1971, and December, 1972, to discuss President Nixon's proposals to lift import quotas on Canadian crude oil.

Nixon said the quotas now largely superseded because of the insatiable demand by U.S. refiners would be lifted if agreement could be reached on supplies for Eastern Canada in the event of an emergency.

Canada has generally taken the position that the two issues are not related and should not be linked.

Replying to questions from committee chairman Henry Jackson, Democratic senator from Washington, Lincoln said there had been "forthright and friendly discussions with Canada . . . and a fair degree of understanding."

But he did not amplify that statement and Canadian sources here said they could make no comment on the talks.

The hearings were held in an atmosphere of extraordinary interest, with 15 senators turning out under bright television lights and before a jam-packed public audience testimony that the growing U.S. energy shortage has finally become a "glamor" issue in American politics.

Nassikas told the committee today gas from Canada's Arctic islands "will be especially expensive and difficult to transport to the mainland."

Other factors likely to inhibit gas imports from Canada, Nassikas said, include Canadian policy protecting domestic needs, the rate of discovery of reserves and capital requirements for pipelines.

Nassikas, 55, a former utility lawyer who has been chairman of the powerful FPC for four years, and other members of that regulatory agency faced close questioning by committee members about natural-gas prices and the effect of freeing such prices from EPC controls.

In Calgary, R. P. Hooper, a senior adviser to Resources Canada said the rising demands of the United States and that country's desire for secure supplies will make development of the Athabasca oil sands more viable.

The higher demand would lead to spectacular increases in the prices of Canadian oil and increased United States interest in Canada's frontier areas.

Nixon Team Linked to Watergate Case

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Howard Hunt, one of the defendants in the Watergate bugging case, today entered a plea of guilty to six charges against him and admitted that political espionage had been ordered by top members of President Nixon's re-election committee.

Hunt, a one-time CIA agent and White House consultant, Wednesday entered a plea of guilty to three of the charges against him, hoping that the other three would be dropped, but Judge John J. Sirica refused to accept the plea.

The only time Hunt showed any emotion in the hearing was when his attorney, William Bittman, pointed out that he could draw prison sentences ranging up to 25 years as a result of the plea. Then he flinched.

After accepting the second plea, Sirica ordered Hunt held under $100,000 bond until a pre-sentencing investigation is completed.

Hunt had initially tried to plead guilty to conspiracy to break into Democratic national headquarters, actually breaking into the Watergate building office, and to listening via bugging devices to telephone conversations of some Democratic officials.

After Sirica refused to accept that plea — omitting reference to three other charges relating to actually placing bugging devices in the offices — Hunt pleaded guilty to all six counts.

The possibility the case would be expanded beyond the simple criminal counts involved in the break-in last June 17 apparently vanished when Bittman, with agreement of the prosecutor, successfully argued against Sirica's suggestion that for Hunt to have his guilty pleas accepted, he explain "how you got into this conspiracy."

Hunt did admit under Sirica's questioning that he was guilty of each count and committed the violations "knowingly, and intentionally and unlawfully."

Bittman argued against Hunt answering the question of how he became involved in the conspiracy on grounds the government plans to reopen a grand jury investigation of the political espionage.

Bittman said Hunt's answers might prejudice his position in that investigation and that his answers might prejudice the judge's own view regarding the other six defendants still standing trial.

Hunt was led out of the courtroom by a marshal 45 minutes after the trial resumed, presumably to be locked up until the $100,000 bond was posted. He appeared grey and haggard but composed as he was led away.

UNUSUALLY HIGH

Sirica indicated he was setting the bond unusually high because Hunt fled government investigators shortly after the break-in, had friends and acquaintances in foreign countries and was not employed.

Bittman argued that Hunt was employed as a writer and had written 46 books.

U.S. Attorney Earl Silbert asked by reporters to elaborate on the upcoming grand jury appearance, would not say if Hunt would be questioned about other undercover political activities allegedly undertaken against the Democrats.

DECLINED

He also declined to answer whether the government has received any assurances from Hunt that he will name any persons — excluding his co-defendants — who might have known about the bugging or other undercover activities.

Other sources, meanwhile, reported that none of Hunt's testimony would be used in the current prosecution of his co-defendants, but would only figure in the exploration of new charges.

The sources stressed that, at present, there is no indication that further indictments or charges are forthcoming.

The other defendants are James W. McCord Jr., former security co-ordinator for the Nixon re-election committee; G. Gordon Liddy, former general counsel for the Committee for the Re-election of the President; and Bernard L. Barker, Frank A. Sturgis, Eugenio R. Martinez and Virgilio Gonzalez, former CIA operatives.

LEADING ISSUE

The case became a leading issue in last year's presidential campaign because of the links between some of the defendants and Nixon's White House and campaign staffs.

The White House and the campaign committee have denied any responsibility.

In his address to the jury, Silbert said there were "obvious political motives."

"It was in a political campaign," Silbert said. "It was directed against Democrats, especially Sen. George McGovern because of his alleged left-wing views."

McCord, Barker, Martinez, Sturgis and Gonzales were captured at gunpoint inside the offices of the Democratic National Committee in the Watergate.

VANCOUVER'S MAYOR WILL ASK FOR MORE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Art Phillips said Wednesday he wants to meet Premier Dave Barrett later this month to discuss how Vancouver can get some more financial assistance.

Phillips said top priority is Barrett's announced intention to end financing of schools by property taxes.

He said that if the method of school financing is altered, it would give the city "elbow room" to perhaps raise property taxes to finance other municipal programs.

Phillips also said he would ask the premier for more welfare assistance.

"We've thought for a long time that it's unfair to charge welfare to property owners," he said.

The mayor said he would like the city's 15 per cent share of welfare eliminated, but admitted that may be unrealistic.

Fishermen Protest

in the Tofino area from further clogging the salmon streams. But Clarke told Hall that the companies are continuing to cut trees and continuing to leave debris in their wake.

Clarke accused the logging companies of "passing the buck" and of increasing their logging activities in the Tofino area in spite of the stop-cutting order.

SOS committee secretary Mike Hill said all that needs to be done is for the logging companies, specifically B.C. Forest Products, to leave greenstrips along the fish-bearing streams, so that the salmon have clear passage up to their spawning grounds.

Several small children, members of the families of the fishermen, carried placards expressing their involvement in the problem. One read: "Save some salmon for us", and another: "I would like to catch fish when I grow up."

Jack Toovey, B.C. Forest Products' forestry manager for tree farm licences, says federal fisheries biologists and B.C. Forest Service and company officials inspect all streams on the Tofino-Ucluelet flats before logging plans are made.

Streams, used as spawning grounds by coho salmon are identified, he says, his company never allowing their men to "yard across them." Yarding is only allowed across minor tributaries that contain no salmon he asserts.

Toovey adds: "No one can say there haven't been any errors in judgment and it is possible that some of the streams yarded across do support a minimal number of fish. But this isn't a casual operation and we stick closely to the identification of the salmon streams prior to logging layout."

Toovey was logging superintendent in the Tofino area up until two years ago. He reports that a group of Ucluelet fishermen met Jan. 3 with B.C. Forest Products personnel, federal fisheries biologists and B.C. Forest Service officers on the flats.

"There was a good understanding reached as to the identification of salmon streams," he says.

Toovey said log jams that float permit the fish to go upstream.

"When requested we remove a log jam that blocks salmon," he said.

John Willow, chairman of the Victoria Sierra Club, agreed with Tovey that the company is yarding across streams which have not been classified salmon streams, but said this did not mean there are no spawning fish in them.

That's why we want a detailed survey of salmon streams on the island," he said. Tovey has admitted that salmon are found in some of these streams. It is another proof of the inadequacy of the fisheries department who do not survey the streams properly."

Subsidy For On-Job Training

The federal government has introduced subsidies for on-the-job training where Canada Manpower has not been able to fill an employer's need for a skilled worker.

Where an employer has a vacancy for an employee requiring a skill and Manpower has been unable to find a qualified person within 30 days, Ottawa will pay 50 per cent of the wages of a person the employer undertakes to train on the job for the first half of the necessary training program and 25 per cent for the latter half.

Wages to be paid would be the "going rate" for the skilled job and the subsidy cannot exceed $118 a week in any case, said Bevis.

It will be a continuing program and besides the private sector will be open to some public employers, including those not financed primarily by tax revenue.

For an employee to be eligible, he or she must be at least 16 and must have been laid off for at least a week.

The training period would vary with the nature of the skill involved and could run from six to 52 weeks with the average about 20 or 22 weeks.

Bevis said the program adds "a new dimension" to skill-upgrading available to employers through Canada Manpower.

Young Cleared On One Count

The dismissal of Campbell River High School principal John Young was upheld by a board of reference on the grounds that Young was guilty of misconduct in relationship to his employer, the school board.

He was exonerated of neglect of duty, the other ground on which he was dismissed Sept. 8, Young said Wednesday after discussing the board of reference's written reports with his lawyer.

The full reports have not yet been released.

Young said the dissenting report written by Lake Cowichan teacher and board of reference member Robert Wilson argued that a teacher should not be dismissed if he was meeting the needs of his students.

"He argued that a row with an employer (the school board) who is not even fully an employer should not be grounds for dismissal," Young said.

According to Young, Galt Wilson, the Prince George lawyer who represented the school board on the board of reference, argued in his report that Young should have resigned his professional position if he wanted to criticize the school board and the education department.

Young said board chairman Bernard Morahan's position in a 28-page report was that Young should have acted as an obedient servant to his masters.

"The board seems to have ignored the fact that an educator's responsibility is to his students," Young commented.

He said it was 99 per cent certain he would take his appeal to the Supreme Court of B.C.

. . . TAKEOVERS

In a declaration at the close of his address in the throne speech debate he said: "I have always been opposed to unnecessary government interference with the operations of the free market. I believe today, on the basis of the experience of the United States, that there should be brought into effect immediately price and wage controls to meet the problem of inflation which is today worsening at a rate almost beyond contemplation."

CHALLENGE

He challenged Prime Minister Trudeau's "monstrous" constitutional position spelled out in the prime minister speech in the debate Monday, that if the government is defeated on a major piece of legislation after winning a vote of confidence in the throne speech debate, it will go to the country.

The proper constitutional practices, which New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis has also said should be followed, would be for the defeated prime minister to advise Governor General Roland Michener to call on Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield to form a government. That should be the practice if the government is defeated within the next two or three months, said Diefenbaker.

Diefenbaker also called for:

A roll-back in freight rates for a period of five years so that the Prairies can proceed with a proper economic development.

CUMPSTON NAMED TO CAPITAL BOARD

North Saanich council has dumped Mayor Trevor Davis as the municipality's director on the Capital Regional District board.

In his place, council has chosen Ald. George Cumpston.

Today, Davis said he isn't unhappy at the reversal of the custom that a municipality's mayor also serves as director on the regional board.

"The appointment is a council prerogotive," he said. "I had suggested myself as director and Cumpston as alternate.

They can do anything. I m very happy because I am extremely busy and have been unable to attend regional meetings."

Rhodesia Violence Feared

LONDON (AP) — British authorities have expressed fears Rhodesia's partial closure of its frontiers with Zambia could develop into a dangerous black-white confrontation in that part of Africa.

In an initial analysis of the situation, officials said informally Wednesday they believe Premier Ian Smith's rebel white minority regime acted without first consulting with the South African or Portuguese governments.

"We regret any developments which increase tensions and hardships in the area," a spokesman told reporters.

"We have consistently condemned the use of violence for political ends and we deplore violence which causes suffering to individuals."

The Smith regime explained in Salisbury on Tuesday its action was in retaliation against Zambia's policy of providing sanctuary for black guerrillas who have vowed to wrest power from Rhodesia's white rulers.

All road and rail traffic to and from Zambia now has been banned except for Zambia's prized copper exports carried to the south by Rhodesian Railways at premium freight rates.

British and Zambian diplomats here reported up to 60 per cent of Zambian food, machinery and other essential imports normally pass through Rhodesian territory — with about one-fourth, or $100-million worth, coming in from South Africa alone.

Other supplies enter the country from the Portuguese territories of Mozambique and Angola.

The meaning of this, the informants said, is that South African and Portuguese interests will be hurt if Smith continues his partial border closure for any length of time.

Britain, at least, is likely to confer soon with all the parties concerned — South Africa, Portugal, Zambia and probably the Rhodesians too — in the hope of halting what could become a slide into even more serious economic conflict.

The Labor government of former prime minister Harold Wilson acknowledged after Smith illegally seized independence in 1965 that Britain was bound in law, politics and honor to cushion Zambia from the shock of Rhodesia's actions.

Britain and Canada airlifted oil and other emergency supplies into Zambia until the crisis eased.

In the light of this precedent Britain would be bound, if asked by the Zambians, to consider new emergency aid measures.

This is because Britain still claims sovereign power over Rhodesia even if the claim is a frail one.

The foreign office took time out to stress the need for a settlement between Rhodesia's feuding white and black communities.

And in private officials were saying the latest development could provide an impetus for a renewed search for a basis of compromise.

This, they reported, is high in the minds of Prime Minister Edward Heath and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

In Lusaba, President Kenneth Kaunda defied the white government of neighboring Rhodesia today and reaffirmed Zambia's "solidarity with those gallant people struggling for their freedom" in southern Africa.

He did not directly mention Rhodesia, which closed its borders with Zambia Tuesday night and demanded that Kaunda halt incursions by black liberation forces.

Kaunda said that Zambians must regard the liberation of southern Africa as an unfinished task in the history of decolonization.

"We must be prepared as a nation to defend our borders against all acts of aggression by desperate men," he said.

"The future of Zambia cannot be secure so long as conditions of conflict prevail

Taxes 'Throttling Woods'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, former attorney-general of British Columbia who now heads Canada's largest forest industry company, said Wednesday the industry is being throttled by taxation in B.C.

Bonner, president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., told a convention of the Truck Loggers Association that "at the moment capital (in B.C.) does not know whether to flow or flee."

He said he was concerned about the possibility of "flirtations with dangerous and experimental policies which are not applicable to conditions in British Columbia."

The rate of taxation already handicapped moves toward job-making expansion in an industry that was the backbone of the province's economy, said Bonner.

"The forest industry in British Columbia will be unable to make the contribution it should to job stability and living standards in this province unless there is a marked improvement in return on invested capital.

"With a rate of taxation higher than any other forest industry in the world, we in British Columbia are seriously handicapped in any effort to finance the kind of expansion that would provide new jobs," he said.

"British Columbia has been referred to in one major capital market as 'an investor's nightmare' because of recently unstable labor conditions and the high cost of operating.

"I know of no country that can indefinitely support both high taxes and high wages," said Bonner.

Bonner told the convention that tax policies were too important to be left to politicians alone, and urged those managing forest industries to "speak up and be heard from on vital economic questions of public policy."

"Government policies, federal or provincial, can make or wreck the economy," he said.

GYM BACKERS SEEK SUPPORT

A parents' committee pushing for a basic gymnastics program in Greater Victoria schools will be seeking signatures to a petition at major shopping centres Friday.

A spokesman for the group said a report to the school board had suggested a lack of parental support for introduction of basic gym, and several hundred signatures had already been obtained to disprove the opinion.

The committee wants to get hundreds more signatures, and personnel will man strategic points in stores between 7 and 9 p.m.

London Flu Hits Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The London flue — an influenza outbreak that has swept through England and Russia — has hit Toronto.

Dr. Peter Middleton of the Hospital for Sick Children said Wednesday the new virus was identified in laboratory samples taken from a Toronto child brought to the hospital Dec. 18.

Since then, he said, the virus has been found in samples taken from a number of other children.

The virus — officially called A-England 42-72 — was found in England last October and has been blamed for an increase in the death rate among the elderly.

The Endless Appetite

Yesterday's headline about an "Energy Shortage in the U.S." referred particularly to a shortage of heating oil resulting mainly from the cold weather in the United States and a consequent heavy demand by customers. But the line may be taken as a forecast as well, for the world is entering on an era in which shortages in fuels and the energy-producing materials with which we are familiar will become increasingly common.

That is not to say that permanent shortages and quotas are now upon us, or that there are not still vast reserves of coal, oil and gas in the earth. But the total supply is limited, while the consumption demand apparently has no limit. Larger populations and an even more rapidly increasing call for necessities and luxuries which depend on heat and power production will have their mathematical effect.

New sources of energy will no doubt appear, and nuclear power will inevitably be greatly expanded and improved. But when our destructive demands on the earth's resources are recognized as extending to pure water and to the air we must have to breathe and to moderate our climate, then the full scope of human needs must be recognized as a crucial problem.

"Energy Shortage in the U.S." is mainly a matter of trade and transportation at the moment, an economic problem which can be solved — even if at the expense of other nations. But already the signs are present that it will soon be a problem for the engineers and the laboratories — and eventually a problem for the consumers who may have to redesign their mode of living drastically in the controlled new world of the future.

Save Those Fish Streams

Ten local organizations, largely interested in protection of the environment, speak for more than their memberships when they call on federal and provincial authorities to protect fish streams from destructive logging practices and sheer carelessness in the handling of cut timber. They represent the opinion of thousands increasingly troubled by the apparent lack of concern for natural assets.

Specifically the combined groups ask Federal Minister Jack Davis and Provincial Minister Bob Williams, the two members of the respective cabinets most directly concerned, to tighten up enforcement of existing regulations covering logging operations and stream protection and revise the rule where such action is necessary.

The B.C. Forest Service has already foreseen the necessity of changing some cutting procedures to protect waterways, particularly by preserving strips of trees along river banks. Encouragement of log salvage on some lakes and shores has also become part of the department's policy.

But, on the evidence of the latest complaints, government efforts have not been enough. Obviously the combined groups are anxious to bring public pressure to bear on the elected representatives, and so they should. We are past the time when timber cutting could be carried out without regard to its impact on other resources.

One conservation spokesman makes a valid point when he notes that while forests are renewable, it takes 70 years or more to provide a replacement crop suitable for the next harvest. But fish streams adequately protected can continue to yield thousands of salmon annually.

"... It's at a time like this that I realize we all should be thankful for living in a democracy ..."

Right to the Final Quibble

PARIS — When President Nixon received French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann last September he said he wanted to end the Indochina war before his reinauguration (which he already expected) in order to wipe clean the diplomatic slate for negotiations with Western Europe and Japan.

There now seems to be some chance that this desire may be realized. Contacts between American and North Vietnamese delegations have resumed at what is called a "technical" level and the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho talks are under way again.

If there is any logic to the situation — which may at times be doubted — new pressures favor an end to the fighting, at least for U.S. involvement. Whether there will be a total halt to the purely Indochinese and purely political civil war (involving three countries) is less probable.

Impressive Arsenal

Washington is certainly eager to get out of the conflict. Now that the Saigon government has been given an impressive arsenal of ground weapons and tactical aircraft, the White House clearly assumes the South Vietnamese should be able to look after themselves for a considerable time to come

Moreover, merciless bombing of the North during the December aerial offensive that followed interruption of the Paris negotiations has undoubtedly curbed the possibility of any serious resumption of the Hanoi offensive so frequently bruited as a possibility.

Indications are that both Moscow and Peking have been active in trying to encourage a settlement although it is not easy for either capital to indicate anything other than full endorsement of the North Vietnamese and Vietcong. France, which has little power in the area involved but more experience than anyone else, has added its own diplomatic wisdom.

From the American viewpoint, Nixon is eager to start a new foreign chapter which will prove far more important when regarded by future historians, focusing on the primordial areas of Europe and Japan that can tilt the power balance in this multipolar world.

He also knows an angry Congress is about to assemble on his doorstep, a Congress in which both houses are dominated by his opponents. These legislators have been incited by hostile official opinion abroad where a "religion" of unconditional peace has been widely expressed, most shrilly in Sweden.

LE DUC THO
... talking again

And, although polls indicate American public opinion is so far less exercised, the influence of important and adverse newspaper criticism, when taken up and echoed by Congress, may well change this situation if a settlement isn't swiftly arranged. All objective factors therefore indicate a speedy formula is likely to be agreed upon in Paris and even truculent and suspicious Saigon seems aware that this is inescapable.

The 30-year Indochina conflict more or less began during World War II after Japan occupied what was then a French colony. Vichy French, Gaullist French, Japanese, Chinese and small groups of Vietnamese were all involved before Tokyo surrendered in August, 1945. That same month the Vietcong's predecessor, the Vietminh, occupied administrative buildings and proclaimed a republic.

The French struck back and a series of negotiations occured at Dalat, Vietnam and at Fontainebleau in 1946 but, after the struggle renewed that December, massive bloodshed set in. It hasn't ceased yet. The Indochina conflict has tarnished every participant.

More Napalm

In January, 1950, napalm was used as a weapon for the first time in history — by the French. When (after the 1954 defeat at Dienbienphu and the Geneva accords) France withdrew, there was a surcease of only seven years before the United States, at first tentatively, moved in. The Americans used more napalm plus, for the first time, six-engined jet bombers, laser bombs and new types of delayed-action mines.

Hanoi's generals, with Soviet aid, built up the greatest anti-aircraft artillery ever seen and developed remarkable improvements in the tactics of revolutionary warfare. And what both North and South Vietnamese did to each other by way of torture, throat-cutting, and deliberate terror, beggars description.

Now, just as a quarter of a million French troops departed in 1954-55, the last of more than a half-million American troops are clearly on their way out, leaving the Vietnamese to each other's mercy, which is not renowned for tenderness.

Whether, months or years hence, there will be a renewed war for that unification which has been denied to Ireland, Palestine, Germany, India and Korea no one can prediet. But this week the last quibbling scene of a sordid southeast Asian tragedy began.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Decline and . . .

For quite some time I've been predicting the fall of the United States. Comparing its weakened condition to that existing in the Roman Empire just before it fell, I often mention to those who would hear me, several symptoms which, experienced by both realms, led to their decline. But my apathetic listeners usually consider me a hopeless pessimist; also, they flatly refuse to accept the idea of the ultimate downfall of the country where our neighbors to the south live.

However, according to The Titan's Crumbling World — by Bruce Hutchison — which appeared in your newspaper (January 4), its brilliant author holds somewhat similar views to mine on the subject. Among other things pertaining to Uncle Sam's declining state and that of ancient Rome's faltering eagle, he says: "Like those of the Roman Empire, in another time of excessive strain, American legions are coming home;" "... Roman moral power was exhausted by too much wealth, too much greed and too many false gods."

In my opinion America's moral power is being depleted by these very same excesses. Having made false gods of money, sex, drugs and liquor, they turn away from God, the true sustainer of life; the One who uplifts the bored, sad and weary, if only they will look to Him for guidance.

In truth, degeneracy in a high degree exists throughout our whole western civilization. And should the United States actually topple, serious repercussions would undoubtedly be felt there.

Poor Uncle Sam. "... Disillusioned in himself and disappointed in a world that shows no gratitude for his boundless generosity, no recognition for his virtues, no charity for his vices," he plods on alone. How sad!

And I'm sure Winston Churchill, having been half-American, a man who once claimed that America was the most generous nation the world has ever known, would be saddened by its present sorry plight, were he alive today; as would be many of his contemporaries.— Depressed.

Nicaragua

The major earthquake which devastated Managua, Nicaragua December 23 leaving several thousand people dead, many thousands injured and most of the citys' 400,000 residents homeless, has resulted in a desperate need for food, clothing and housing facilities.

CARE is there helping to meet the monumental requirements. CARE of Canada has already pledged $25,000 to the task and will increase its commitment if possible. We are counting on the compassion and generosity of Canadians to allow CARE personnel on the scene in Managua to supply the basic requirements of life for these destitute people.

CARE has been operating a feeding program in poverty areas of Nicaragua for six years and our people there are very familiar with the area and the needs of the Nicaraguans.

Our staff will continue to work with and provide assistance to the victims long after the earthquake has disappeared from the news. For this we require dollars to buy and distribute food, purchase clothing and provide temporary shelter.

Donations of any size will be gratefully received and acknowledged by our office at 510 W. Hastings St., Vancouver 2, B.C. — Douglas W. Smith, Regional Director, CARE of Canada.

Simple Solution

It is my considered opinion that all those who write (including your editorial writer) about the Irish question fail to take into account the basic reason for the "British problem" in Ireland — a problem which has existed for at least 400 years.

England established three plantations (colonies) in Ireland. There were the Munster, Ulster and Leinster plantations. Two of these disappeared because of the Irish uprisings, and, more importantly, because of the British government's policy of "buying out" the anglo-Irish population's lands and businesses. In Ulster however, this policy was not promoted with enthusiasm. Thus today, we find a small area occupied by a largely Protestant Anglo-Irish population. This area is that of Co. Antrim and the area within a radius of 25 miles of Belfast. (Population 900,000).

I wonder if the British people will ever understand how the real Irish feel about their country's freedom? The Unionists of Ulster are not Irish. No, sir, never have been. They are really British in Ireland. Nothing more or less.

There is a simple solution: Do as Gen. de Gaulle did in Algeria, call home to Britain those who do not wish to live in a Free United Ireland. I am an Irish Protestant, who was brought up in the Protestant educational system. However, after being in Canada and having gone to UBC and studied history especially, I now can see clearly who is responsible for the present trouble. — George Sandys-Jones, Vancouver.

Equal Treatment

This is to say that I don't think the elderly have been forgotten financially, although the "New Horizon" program is useless, redundant, ridiculous and wasteful. Some people are never satisified with what they get — wages, pensions, relief — but are always asking for more. Government hand-outs should never provide luxuries — only needs.

The difference between the "haves" and the "have-nots" usually is that the "haves" have exercised brain and brawn, energy and diligence to accomplish and achieve, while the "have-nots" have dozed, played and squandered. Both should be treated equally in the matter of old-age pensions, instead of penalizing the thrifty by a means test.

Those engaged in governing — usually doing more harm than good — are comparable to those who are always seeking to get rather than give, judging by the exorbitant salaries they allot themselves. Their stipend should be curbed.

It is the people who labor, and those who provide the wherewithal to labor, that are the life-blood of a nation, and who should be encouraged and induced to do so — for the benefit of all — instead of being hindered by Unions being allowed to enforce their demands.— L. Pratt (Mrs.) Galt, Ont.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of Jan. 11, 1913:

A panther measuring eight and a half feet from tip to tail was brought into the city yesterday by George Janes from the Twenty-Mile Post along the E and N route. The great beast had been shot in the lower part of the head, the jaw was broken with the impact of the bullet. The panther had evidently found game, for his tracks were marked by the carcasses of animals. Janes will receive a bounty of $25 from the government. Three deer, with the hearts torn out, were found.

Down the Crowded Turnpike at 70 Miles an Hour to What?

BRUCE HUTCHISON

WASHINGTON — The speed limit on the eight lanes of the New Jersey Turnpike is 70 miles an hour in most places and is usually exceeded. But on a Sunday night not long ago the snarled and snarling traffic outside New York moved at three miles and sometimes didn't move at all.

To a Canadian, that day's drive from Boston to Washington was not merely a horror. It was also a parable teaching a lesson which involves Canada more directly than it yet understands. How long, one asked, could this waste of the world's fuel in gasoline engines go on, and how much poison could the world's thin envelope of atmosphere endure?

Next day, in Washington, some answers were offered to me. The text of a significant and little-noted speech by Professor Harvey Brooks, at the Council of Foreign Relations, is at once a hopeful and frightening document.

As perhaps the most respected engineer and practical scientist of Harvard University, Professor Brooks argues that the world has the technology to produce, in the long run, enough energy and goods for even its almost insatiable requirements. But has it the wisdom to combine and distribute the resources of 130 separate, quarrelsome national states? The political task, in other words, is far more difficult than the technical and may well fail, with disastrous results for humanity entire.

In the short run, Professor Brooks agrees, the United States, as the greatest national consumer, will face a grave shortage and will try to overcome it by vast imports of fuel and other raw materials. When the price system, or law of supply and demand, inevitably raises the cost of these products, the present reckless waste may be curbed but the total demand will keep rising.

By 1985, the United States probably will have to spend $30 billion annually on foreign fuels as against only $3 billion in 1970. By the year 2000, it will use minerals worth $117 billion annually and will provide only $53 billion worth of them from its own production.

To an economist such figures, if approximately accurate, must be appalling. To the United States government, already running a dangerously high foreign exchange deficit, they pose a financial dilemma without precedent.

How are imports on this scale to be paid for? And, still more questionable, will the foreign owners of raw materials be willing to sell them, at any price, even if payment is offered in manufactured American exports or services?

The United States is now in transition from near-sufficiency to dependence, for the first time, on the world and an open, worldwide trading system while its native protectionists are proposing exactly the opposite. In economic terms, it is crossing the greatest watershed of its history.

The same watershed has been crossed already by Britain, Western Europe and Japan. They are totally dependent, for instance, on oil from the Middle East where Russian power is busily establishing itself. As Professor Brooks observes, the danger of war to capture vital and scarce resources is a very real danger if the nations cannot learn to distribute them by peaceful trade.

He can foresee a nuclear breakthrough in the production of energy after a time of desperate shortage. He can foresee enough energy to produce a reasonably adequate supply of goods. But he cannot foresee (who can?) a breakthrough in the politics of the world—an agreement amid the nations to share the world's resources equitably as they are not shared now.

Here, of course, we encounter the supreme threat to human civilization as pictured by the Club of Rome and other investigators. They do not agree with scientists like Professor Brooks who think that the technical problem can be solved if the political problem is mastered. On the contrary, they argue that both problems are insoluble if the world's population continues to explode, to exhaust its wealth and to poison its environment.

Both the optimists and the pessimists agree, however, that the world's affairs cannot go along indefinitely as they are going now; that the total demand for materials of all kinds must soon change those economic and political affairs more drastically than any government has yet realized or, at least admitted.

Leaving aside the global threat for the moment (though it is obviously inescapable for any nation) Canada's own dilemma begins to clarify. How much energy, in the form of oil, gas, coal and hydro electricity, how much raw material in other forms, can it afford to sell to its American neighbor and overseas? How can the United States, or any customer, pay for them? Only by increased exports to Canada and directly, or indirectly, by multilateral trade through other nations.

Where does all this leave a Canada eager to export manufactured, labor-intensive goods instead of raw materials but not eager for competitive imports? More important, how long can even Canada's great treasury of natural wealth stand the strain?

These are momentous issues for tomorrow if not for today. Yet, clearly, Canada has hardly begun to grasp the nature of the decisions not far ahead of it. For the time being, they are submerged by a political crisis which, in historic terms, will be brief and unimportant. When the crisis has passed, however, we must re-assess our place in the whole changing scheme of things as they move down the crowded turnpike.

The Press in Retreat?

THE SUN
An Editorial

The annual reports on the health of the world's news media issued by the Zurich headquarters of the International Press Institute tend to be depressing at the best of times with their tales of press-gagging in this banana republic and that. As the freedom of the press is eroded, so is the freedom of every citizen everywhere.

The report just issued, representing the collective opinion of 1,700 members in 62 non-Communist countries, is no exception in the bleak picture it paints of the continuing conversion of the press in so many places into a servant of the state. Attacks on press freedom mounted throughout the world in 1972, it reported, and these met with waning resistance.

Nothing new? Well, yes there was. There was a newcomer in the institute's rogues gallery and it didn't look prepossessing at all. But then, how could the United States, which considers itself a cornerstone of world liberty, look anything else in such seedy company?

"In the United States," says the report, "the government in various guises is attempting to chip away at press freedom through the courts and by threats of court action. The intention, it seems, is to make the journalists timid in research for the facts and the public nervous when confronted by a reporter asking for them."

In its search for the facts, the world press organization had no need to dig very hard. Whether the start was the inflammatory anti-press speeches of Vice-President Spiro Agnew, or anti-press decisions of the Nixon-packed Supreme Court, harassment of the news media now has reached a point in the U.S. where the terms "chips" seems an understatement indeed.

The chips, if that's what they are to be called, range from the White House threat to require local broadcast stations to monitor network news reports to what has become almost a wholesale jailing of reporters who refuse to identify their news sources.

The former has been described by the American Society of Newspaper Editors as outright "censorship," the latest weapon in "an attempt to undermine the credibility of those segments of the press that the administration has considered unfriendly." The latter — the jailing of newsmen who feel bound by professional and personal ethics to protect their news sources — is just the longer way around. And perhaps not that much longer, either, when a reporter such as Bill Farr, of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, could remain in jail for life for protecting his sources while the cult killer, Charles Manson, the subject of his challenged stories, could be free on parole in seven years.

This is both an absurdity and an obscenity and, to their credit, a number of U.S. states are writing into law an increased measure of reporter privilege. There remains however, a general open season on newsmen who decline to surrender confidential information to this tribunal or that. Whatever valid criticisms may be made of today's newspapers, television and radio, harassment that can only dry vital news sources should be recognized as dangerous by everyone, Canadians by no means excluded.

Canada is hardly immune to press-muzzling; Alberta's Premier Aberhart may be long dead, but his vision of a captive press spouting propaganda for its masters dies harder.

The attorney-general of Saskatchewan believes government has a "responsibility" to impose "press councils" on the media, for example, "if nothing happens voluntarily."

In the summer of 1971, a Toronto Globe and Mail reporter was fined $500 for refusing to tell a judicial inquiry how he obtained a copy of a confidential Ontario government report on land acquisition.

Just last February, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was ordered to produce film footage for an inquiry into alleged Toronto "police brutality" — and did so, under protest.

The Professional Federation of Quebec Journalists claimed "about 50 cases" of police interference, including unjustified arrests of reporters, at the time of the Quebec separatist outrages.

And while he perhaps was more to be pitied than scorned, Victoria's own mayor, Peter Pollen, attempted only a month ago to prohibit the release of information to reporters through channels other than committees or council — this after a reporter dared to dig out the expense accounts of junketing aldermen.

What concerns the International Press Institute, no less than the growing infringements on the freedom of the press, is "the general impression of a press retreat" before intimidation. It says: "On the day when the press resigns itself to losing this war — in a steadily shrinking free world — the only choice remaining . . . will be its freedom to choose under which regime it would prefer to be enslaved."

In the context of Mayor Peter Pollen, such a fear is amusing. In the context of the Michigan state legislature — which only recently was considering the confinement of legislative newsmen in plexiglass cages (also in retaliation for stories about lawmakers' junketing) so they couldn't talk to senators — it is not quite so funny.

Perhaps one reason for what the Press Institute sees as resignation on the part of the news media is a certain honest confusion over what "rights," if any, it really can claim. In 1971, the Ottawa Journal, in explaining why freedom of the press does not mean that a reporter may conceal his sources," said that it is "the tradition of courageous reporting and publishing in Canada . . . that their work is done in the knowledge that they may suffer for it and that they are willing to suffer for it."

This was good, old-fashioned, journalistic masochism or, as the Journal put it, a "burden" that "is easily borne."

Whether it remains good enough today — when, in the words of the International Press Institute, "a growing number of governments, parliamentary representatives, citizens and even some members of the press begin to accept that attacks on freedom of expression are legitimate and justifiable" is doubtful indeed.

Conflicting Legislation

By TOM WICKER
New York Times

Barely a fifth of the 132 members of the United Nations "enjoy what can genuinely be called freedom of information," the International press Institute reported the other day. Although it listed the United States as one of the fortunate few, it also concluded that the Nixon Administration is "attempting to chip away at press freedom through the courts and by the threats of court action." That is no news to the American press, and will not be much news to the new Congress, which is sure to consider the matter in the coming session. On the one hand, there will be the Administration's proposed legislation linking the relicensing of television stations to their supposed "balance" in news presentations; and on the other there will be the question of relief for reporters from the Supreme Court decision holding that the Constitution does not grant immunity against the forced disclosure of confidential sources.

On the second question, Congress will have to decide what kind of relief — if it wants to grant any — might be appropriate. One proposal, embodied in any number of bills, would provide an absolute prohibition against compulsory disclosure. In a draft measure backed by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, for instance, "no person" could be made to disclose "in any federal or state proceeding" the source of news gathered for public dissemination, or "any unpublished news or information" obtained while gathering material that had been published.

That's what any reporter would like to have, and no reporter can quibble if publishers really are prepared to go to bat for such a sweeping bill. But there are at least two major problems with it.

The first is that this statute would be "pre-emptive" in that Congress would be dictating to the states what they could and could not do, even in purely state proceedings, thus possibly arousing the opposition of some members of Congress from states where present laws are different, or where there is no law protecting newsmen's sources. The other, and probably more important, objection is that anything so sweeping and absolute is almost bound to run into determined political opposition.

Reporters, after all, are not that popular, either with politicians or with their constituents. As the International Press Institute noted, the "true danger" is that "a growing number of governments, parliamentary representatives, citizens and even some members of the press" have begun to accept the idea that "attacks on freedom of expression are legitimate and acceptable."

Nor is the press, on the whole, so free of vice and self-service that it can guarantee that an absolute privilege would not be abused (although the root question is how to insure press freedom, not how to enforce press responsibility). Absolutist laws, moreover, are always subject to the objection that not every case can be foreseen; and such a statute might enable many a legislator to plead that he was for the press — but not that much for the press.

These objections have led to a more limited approach, best represented in a bill sponsored by Senator Lowell Weicker of Connecticut. It would apply only to federal, not state, proceedings, although Mr. Weicker and his staff contend that it also would provide a "model" for state legislative action.

The Weicker bill would bar any federal grand jury, agency, department or commission, and either house or any committee or Congress from compelling disclosure of sources by bona fide newsmen, as comprehensively defined in the bill.

On the other hand, in a federal court, if an action was pending in a case of murder, forcible rape, aggravated assault, kidnapping, airline hijacking, or breach of a national security statute, disclosure of sources could be ordered by the judge if it could be proved that the source was of "substantial and direct relevance" to the fair determination of the case, and if it could be demonstrated that the source was not reasonably available in any other manner.

This approach looks more feasible, politically, than an absolutist bill. But would it in fact lead the states to adopt similar action? No one can say. Moreover, the Weicker bill primarily protects the identity of sources; but sometimes unpublished information in a reporter's notebook or tape recorder is equally sensitive. And if the protection is not absolute, judges may find ways to circumvent it, as they have been doing with some state laws that purport to protect reporters in gathering news.

The only thing certain is that Congress had better act soon, before the "chipping away" makes the First Amendment unrecognizable.

THE DIARY OF A SOLDIER

'There Was Worry on Every Face'

By PETER OSNOS

SAIGON — From atop some sandy hill near the demilitarized zone, where the fighting is still fiercest, South Vietnamese Marine private Vo Phuc Huynh wrote his sister a letter last month about the war he is in and the prospects for peace.

"I think," he said in a neat script on schoolboy's copy paper, "that the battle here will be difficult to end. There may be a temporary lull, for the sake of politics, but permanent peace will be very hard."

Huynh, a 21-year-old high school dropout, is a reluctant warrior who played hide-and-seek with military and police authorities for more than three years before landing in the marines. It wasn't punditry that prompted his observations on when the fighting would subside.

Since the cease-fire won't bring peace, as far as he is concerned, Huynh was advising the family to continue efforts to buy his 18-year-old brother out of the infantry.

"You tell father to try once more with Mr. Dat," he wrote, "and if brother is assigned to the artillery branch, that will be all right, it won't be necessary to go to a more expensive branch." (The expense entailed is the bribe to a defence official who can arrange a safer assignment.)

Vo Phuc Huynh's letter is a vivid account of life in the combat he long sought to avoid: The terrible fear of his first real battle, the exhilaration of survival. It is one of those rare chances afforded Americans to learn the private thoughts of a simple Vietnamese, unemcumbered by the distortions and formalities of an interview.

What gives Huynh's letter a measure of extra significance is that the attitude he expresses seems to reflect a widespread feeling among Vietnamese, that peace for them is not truly at hand. A ceasefire, sophisticated Vietnamese tell Americans, will enable the United States to leave, but it will not resolve the political disputes that caused the fighting to begin.

For the foreseeable future, Vo Phuc Huynh and more than one million other South Vietnamese will have to remain in uniform to defend President Thieu's government against the uncertainties that lie ahead. For Huynh, home is still a long way off.

"This letter may worry father, mother and the family," Huynh wrote (but) "so far I am safe. I pray God and Buddha will help me always during my days in this sterile, dangerous desert."

The letter was made available by Huynh's family. (All the names are pseudonyms.) Three times in the past two years, Huynh himself has described his exploits for the Washington Post, first as a determined draft-dodger, later as a deserter and then as an inmate in a military prison from which he escaped last December.

Huynh has never thought of himself as a malingerer. He was, he said on each occasion, just a young man who didn't want to fight because he didn't want to be killed, like hundreds of thousands of other young Vietnamese. He had a girl friend he has since married and now they have a baby son.

The hardships of being a soldier — service that can only end in death, crippling injury or old age — was more than Huynh wanted to bear, especially for a government that meant nothing to him and against a foe he couldn't hate.

After he escaped from jail a year ago, Huynh lived with his family in a Saigon suburb. The time was uneventful except for visits from police agents he had to bribe not to turn him in. With time, it became harder to keep the authorities at bay and Huynh grew restless as a fugitive, unable to ride his motorcycle or visit freely with friends.

He turned himself in and became a Marine. After training, he was sent to Quangtri Province and there on Dec. 19, after dinner, he sat down to write a letter home.

For 12 hours that day, he began, his unit had been in battle. It started at 4 a.m. when the battalion was shelled. "There was worry on every face," he wrote. "I too was frightened hearing the 130-m.m. guns and the Communists shouting 'attack.'"

Then in the morning his unit was dispatched to support a squad besieged nearby. "On the road," Huynh recalled, "my brain strained, my eyes were wide open . . . there was an awful silence and remnants in the sand: A helicopter with only a rotor and its engine left, some scattered dried bones, a burned and rusted Communist anti-aircraft gun."

The squad was relieved, but the fighting went on: "On the hill overlooking the battlefield I was fascinated from the first minute. I shot with sharp eyes and hands at shadows behind sand dunes, bushes and deserted temples. I wore a helmet and a bullet-proof vest, but my friends attacked in their uniforms and with bare heads. It looked as if it were a mock play, full of fun, my sister."

As the day progressed, Huynh said, his fear disappeared and he fought with enthusiasm: "I was calm and able to protect myself from stray bullets. I saw two Communist companies of nearly 200 men break contact and run toward another field. It made me shiver to see them. My God! They ran under heavy shelling as if they had iron skins. Theer were no airstrikes, so most escaped. But they left a small unit to fight until death to cover the others' withdrawal."

The battle ended at 4 p.m. "Wounded men were helped to our hill to wait for armored cars that would carry them to battalion headquarters," he wrote. "How sad I felt when seeing them. One was hit by a bullet through the lung to his back. He was in agony but still wished to survive and asked over and over if a car was available.

"Not far away, two poncho-wrapped packages were heavy against the wind. They were waiting to be flown to the cemetery in Saigon. Everyone was relieved but tired. The red color of blood was clear. I became so sad, perhaps I'm not used to the evacuation scene after a battle. But that's war."

He wrote of the cease-fire and the arrangements for his brother and then he concluded:

"I wish good luck to the family, with better work and more money so that father and mother could be relieved of concern. I also wish you, sister, your husband Nguyen and my Nephew Duong much more luck and happiness than my wife and I.

"Huynh."

Long Words and Fat Talk

RUSSELL BAKER

Americans don't like plain talk anymore. Nowadays they like fat talk. Show them a lean, plain word that cuts to the bone and watch them lard it with thick greasy syllables front and back until it wheezes and gasps for breath as it comes lumbering down upon some poor threadbare sentence like a sack of iron on a swayback horse.

"Facilitate" is typical of the case. A generation ago only sissies and bureaucrats would have said "facilitate" in public. Nowadays we are a nation of "facilitate" utterers.

"Facilitate" is nothing more than a gout-ridden, overstuffed "ease." Why has "ease" fallen into disuse among us? It is a lovely little bright snake of a word which comes hissing quietly off the tongue and carries us on, without fuss and French horns, to the object which is being eased.

This is English at its very best. Easing is not one of the great events of life; it does not call for Beethoven; it is not an idea to get drunk on, to wallow in, to encase in multiple oleaginous syllabification until it becomes a pompous ass of a word like "facilitate."

A radio announcer was interviewing a doctor the other day. The doctor worked in a hospital in which he apparently — one never really hears more than three per cent of anything said on radio — controlled the destinies of many social misfits. The announcer asked the purpose of his work.

The doctor said it was "to facilitate the re-entry into society as functioning members . . ." The mind's Automatic Dither Cutoff went to work at this stage, and the rest of the doctor's answer was lost, but it was too late. Seeds of gloom had been planted.

The doctor's passion for fat English had told too much. One shuddered for the patients at his hospital — "institutional complex," he probably called it — for it must be a dreadful thing to find oneself at the mercy of a man whose tongue drips the fatty greases of "facilitate." He doubtless, almost surely, says "utilize" too, when he means "use", and "implement," when he means "do."

Getting his patients out of the hospital and back home has become, for this doctor, "the re-entry into society," a technological chore of the sort performed in outer space. Having facilitated their re-entry into society, he will be able to greet them as "functioning members."

How dreadful it must be, caged up and antisocial in a beautifully sterilized container for misfits, for a patient to find himself at the mercy of men whose English is fat, who see him as an exercise in engineering and who are determined to turn him into a "functioning member."

Peace, doctors! Of course it is merely a manner of speaking, although the "merely" may not be quite so merely as it sounds.

We are what we think, and very often we think what we say rather than what we say we think.

Long words, fat talk — they may tell us something about ourselves. Has the passion for fat in the language increased as self-confidence has waned? We associate plain talk with the age of national confidence. It is the stranger telling the black hat, "When you call me that, smile." It is the campaign of 1948 when a President of the United States could open a speech by saying, "My name's Truman. I'm President of the United States and I'm trying to keep my job."

Since then campaign talk has become fatter and more pompous, as though we need sounds that seem weighty to conceal a thinness of the spirit from which they emanate. But politicians are not our corrupters here; we are all in love with the fat sound.

There is the radio disc jockey who cannot bring himself to say that the temperature at the studio is "now" 45 degrees, but must fatten it up, extend it, make more of it, score it for kettle drums, by declaring that the temperature at the studio is "currently" 45 degrees, and often, carried into illiteracy in his passion for fat talk, "presently," 45 degrees.

Newspapers seem to be the father and mother of fat. The bombing is never the stark, dramatic "intense," but always the drawled, over-weight "intensive." Presidents are rarely allowed to "say" the weather is improving; the papers have them "declare" it, "state," it, "issue a challenge for the weather bureau to deny" it.

Why do we like our words so fat, but our women so skinny?

Canada Council To Expand Grant Range

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council, set up 15 years ago to help the arts and sciences, said Thursday it will take a more active role in supporting the humanities and social sciences.

The council said in its annual report, tabled in Parliament, that the fastest growing range of subsidies last year was in the arts, and this year it will turn its attention to the other fields it supports.

The council paid out $34.9 million in the fiscal year ended last March 31, compared with $32.3 million the previous year. This year its budget is $38.6 million.

Of the total outlays last year, $33.3 million went in grants, bursaries and other forms of direct support to the arts, letters and sciences, while the remainder of the expenditures went to administration costs and to the Canadian Commission for the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Spending on the arts last year rose to $12.3 million from $10.4 million in 1970-71.

Expenditures on the humanities and social sciences rose little, to $19.6 million from $19.4 million.

The report said the last year was one of "questioning our own programs and surveying the needs of the publics we serve." This will be a continuing process.

In the arts last year, more grants were made for chamber music and modern dance, "both of which are mobile and well adapted to touring," and to cooperative visual arts studies "in which a high degree of experimentation is generally encouraged."

The effect was to spread Canada Council money more widely.

Council help to the humanities and social sciences grew rapidly during the last half of the 1960s and reached a plateau in the last two years.

There were significant increases last year in the council's financial help for publishing the findings of scientific research.

New, in place of filling major gaps in the field of the humanities and social sciences, the council will give more support to better exchanges of research knowledge.

Grants in excess of $250,000 each were made to:

Montreal Symphony Orchestra, $396,000; Toronto Symphony, $396,000; Vancouver Symphony Society, $255,000; Canadian Opera Company, Toronto, $343,000; National Theatre School, Montreal, $408,500; Theatre du Nouveau Monde, Montreal, $380,000; Stratford Shakespearean Festival, $385,000 for 1971 and $410,000 for 1972; National Ballet Guild, Toronto, $500,000; Humanities Research Council of Canada and Social Science Research Council of Canada, $343,095.

B.C. Pushes Plywood Overseas

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government has allocated $660,000 as its share of a program to promote foreign sales of the province's forest products, Industrial Development Minister Alex Macdonald said Wednesday.

The contribution represents the province's one-third share of costs in a scheme in which it is a partner with the federal government and the Council of Forest Industries.

Macdonald told the annual convention of the Truck Loggers Association that emphasis will be placed on the overseas sale of B.C. plywood.

The promotion campaign is a five-year plan which began in 1970 and the new allocation will apply to the fiscal year beginning April 1, said Gordon Draeseke, president of CFI.

The 1973 prospects for the forest industry look bright, Macdonald said, and for the first half at least the prospect for exports to the United States is attractive with 1.5 million housing starts scheduled there.

One result of the foreign demand for B.C. forest products, he noted, is a price distortion in the domestic market where local prices "seem to be soaring out of control."

The situation is one calling for a co-operative effort by labor, government and industry to meet the many problems of the moment."

Volume of Information To Delay Radio Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — A two-day hearing by a legislative subcommittee on possible live radio and television coverage of the B.C. legislature ended Wednesday with chairman Hugh Cutis saying he was pleased with the submissions and that the committee's report would be delayed.

In making the assignment, Speaker Gordon Dowding gave the committee a Jan. 15 deadline, but Curtis said this would be extended by "several working days" because of the volume of information gathered.

Following a field-study trip which included the New York United Nations headquarters, Ottawa and the Alberta legislature, the four-man committee, headed by the Conservative MLA for Saanich-and-the-Islands, heard briefs from media representatives in Vancouver.

Most of the discussions concerned the technical aspects of live television coverage of the B.C. house, with Curtis suggesting at one point that an advisory committee might have to be set up to deal with technical problems such as lighting, camera placement and the operation of television equipment.

ENGLISH, FRENCH HARD TO LEARN

English and French are among the most difficult languages to learn says a report by a University of Victoria education professor.

Those languages cause problems "because of the complexity and irregularity of the spelling of French and English", said Dr. John Downing.

Dowing released Wednesday his 14-country study of methods of teaching children to read, the result of more than three years of research.

The book, Comparative Reading: Cross-National Studies of Behavior and Process in Reading and Writing, is published by the Macmillan Company in New York.

The problem with English, said Downing, is sentences like "I like my pie." Each word in the sentence has the same vowel sound, yet each is written a different way. For children learning to read, this is confusing.

"It is of paramount importance that the materials of the reading lesson parallel the child's experience of spoken language in his home environment," said Downing.

"Unfortunately, in languages like French and English the teacher finds it difficult to do this."

Canada was not included in the international survey because there has been almost no research done on Canadian education as a whole, said Downing. Most research into Canadian education is done on a province-wide basis, he said.

French Students Scorn Drugs

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — A survey released today by the Alcohol and Drug Addiction Research Foundation covering drug use in Kapuskasing, Ont., elementary schools shows a significant difference in drug use between French and English-speaking students.

The study, conducted in the fall of 1971, included a survey of 1,770 students in Grades 6, 7 and 8 at two English-speaking schools, nine French-speaking and one English-speaking separate school.

Thirteen drugs were covered in the survey, including painkillers such as aspirin, tobacco, alcohol, glue and solvents, as well as marijuana, LSD, amphetamines and tranquillizers.

The report showed that a much higher percentage of students from English-speaking schools used painkilling drugs, alcohol and marijuana than did the French students.

It also found that 42 per cent of the English-speaking students used alcohol compared with 27 per cent of the French-speaking students.

However, the study shows nine per cent of French-speaking students reported tranquillizer use compared with five per cent of the English-speaking students.

Five per cent of the French used amphetamines, while two per cent of the English-speaking students said they had used such drugs.

There was also a difference between the two groups on the question on how they receive their information about drugs. The report said 44 per cent of the students from French-language schools placed the most trust in their parents when it came to learning about drugs. Only 26 per cent of the English-speaking students said they looked to their parents as a source of drug information.

But the proportion of English students who most trusted their family doctor or friends on drug matters was almost twice that of the French.

The two language groups did not differ greatly in the trust each placed about drug information received from the school or the news media.

WARDAIR STEWARDESSES VOTE FOR A STRIKE

TORONTO (CP) — The 43 Toronto-based stewardesses of Wardair Canada, an Edmonton charter airline, voted unanimously Wednesday to strike this weekend in their contract dispute with the company.

Wardair president Maxwell Ward said in a telephone interview from Edmonton with the Toronto Star that the airline may try to keep operations going as normal, but declined to say how this could be done.

He said the 1,200 Canadians currently on Wardair holiday charters in the Caribbean, Florida and Hawaii might suffer temporary disruptions. "We have a contingency plan to compensate in the event of a strike," he said. "We don't strand anybody."

He declined to disclose how those stranded would be brought back to Canada and said he could not give people assurances that they would be refunded money if forced to return on regular airlines.

Copper Price Hike 'Good News'

By Al Forrest
Times Business Editor

British Columbia copper producers were jubilant today at news prices had increased to 53 cents per pound from 50.5 cents.

"This is the best news we have had in a long time. Quite frankly we were just marking time in 1972. This will make a big difference to us."

In Vancouver, one mining company spokesman estimated the price increase would mean an additional $20 million to copper producers in B.C. in 1973 based upon today's price increase alone.

The production was based upon an estimated value of B.C. copper production of $318 million in 1973, an increase of $100 million over 1972.

Rhodesia banned rail transport across the border to halt the smuggling of arms to Rhodesian rebels. The effect is to cut off most of Zambia's coal supply, vital in Zambia's copper milling.

In addition, Kennecott Copper Corp, announced it has seized 3,000 tons of Chilean copper. The seizure was made to satisfy Kennecott claims for compensation for its nationalized mines in Chile.

Because the copper will not be sold immediately, it has been removed from the world's supply. Kennecott is a major United States copper producer.

The increases brought strong market activity among Canadian copper producers including Nornada Mines, Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting, Bethlehem, Cranduc, Gibraltar, Cominco, Lornex and Pine Point.

In Port Hardy, Pratt said the copper price increases constituted the first good news for copper producers in many months.

He said North American copper producers had discovered they were at a competitive disadvantage because no amount of machinery or technical ability can result in high profits out of low-grade open pit copper mines such as are found on this continent.

African and South American mines with high quality copper in underground mines had a strong production advantage that could only be overcome by a more advantageous marketing position.

Nearness to customers in United States and Japan and political stability were two major assets assisting B.C. producers, he said.

He said producers needed high prices to operate profitably and prices had sagged in 1972.

Average copper price in 1972 had been 43.97 cents per pound, down from 46.69 cents per pound in 1971.

Island Copper, owned by Utah Mining and Construction Company of San Francisco, is the major copper producer in B.C. at present although two other mines are expected to surpass its production in 1973.

Copper mines are rated by the amount of ore their mills can process per day. The ore produces about .4 per cent copper concentrate.

The major copper mines, with the 1973 rated capacity, are: Gilbraltar 40,000 tons of ore per day, Lornex 38,000, Island Copper 33,000, Brenda 24,000 (copper and molybdenum), Bethlehem 16,000, Similkameen 15,000, Granilse, 14,000 Bell Copper 10,000, Granduc 7,000 and Graigmont 5,000.

B.C. Firms Facing Uncertainties As Britain Introduces Tariffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new tariff system set for next year is causing uncertainties on the future of about a quarter of British Columbia's $165 million in annual exports to the United Kingdom.

The tariffs go into effect in January, 1974, as the result of Britain's entry into the European Common Market.

Principal products affected will be certain paper and paperboard products, lead, zinc, and fish products.

In the long run, however, this trade is expected to pick up again as Britain gains economic muscle as a result of joining the ECM.

The tariffs will hit B.C.'s dwindling trade with the U.K. in 1974. 13.5 per cent of the province's total exports went to the U.K., but now only 5 per cent goes there.

Hardest hit will be the nearly $20 million worth of paper and paper-board product exported annually. Newsprint is exempted.

TARIFF CLIMBING

In 1974, these products will face a 4.8-per-cent tariff which will scale up in steps until it reaches 12 per cent in 1977.

In addition, last summer Finland and Sweden, Canada's main competitor in these products, concluded an agreement allowing them to export the same products to Britain virtually duty-free.

Canada's loss of its present parity of entry to Britain "will be a wall of formidable proportions," Howard Hart, Canadian Pulp and Paper president, says.

Negotiations involving lead, zinc, and fish products also appear to be headed for tariffs, says B.C.'s industrial development department.

B.C. now exports about $10 million worth each of lead and zinc to Britain annually, and $4.5 million in fish products, mainly salmon.

Common Market countries have an eight per cent tariff against salmon, but it is still entering Britain duty-free.

A department spokesman predicts, however, that the tariff will be "somewhere between duty-free and eight per cent," and a similar situation exists in negotiations over lead and zinc.

The spokesman suggests that only a small portion of future exports would benefit from the establishment of some duty-free quotas. An exception to this could be proposed tariffs on paper and paper products, excluding newsprint, since Common Market countries face forecast future shortages of forest products.

NAME EXEMPTIONS

The countries have already exempted newsprint and wood pulp, and have lowered the 13 per cent tariff on plywood.

Dressed lumber will face a five-per-cent duty.

Hart says that "the situation is very serious, but not hopeless."

Hart says he is reasonably optimistic about the future of trade and the tariffs, but warns "time is growing short" and trade negotiations must "repair the damage."

In British Columbia, hardest hit will be the Prince George Pulp and Paper Ltd. mill, producing about 107,000 tons of soft kraft a year. About 80 per cent of this production, worth more than $14 million, is exported to Britain.

The mill, jointly owned by Canadian Forest Products and the British multinational giant, Reed International, also produces 140,000 tons of market pulp a year.

About 300 employees are involved in the soft kraft production.

Company officials say alternative markets will have to be considered if the full weight of the tariffs is imposed.

U.S. SUPREME COURT THROWS OUT BIG AWARD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court threw out today a multi-million dollar judgment in favor of Trans World Airlines against industrialist Howard Hughes and the Hughes Tool Co.

An award of $138 million to TWA was originally ordered in 1963 by U.S. District Judge Charles M. Metzner of New York. Interest has been increasing the amount by about $900,000 a month.

Metzner entered the judgment when Hughes, who has not appeared in public for many years, failed to show up for the proceedings. The amount was said to be the largest single judgment ever awarded in a private case.

TWA sued for treble damages under the Clayton anti-monopoly law on grounds that Hughes Tool Co. (Toolco) illegally used its business with TWA to establish itself as a supplier to other airlines.

The complaint said TWA had suffered financially because under Toolco's dominance it had been prevented from acquiring an adequate jet fleet in the 1950s.

The majority opinion by Justice William O. Douglas said the trannsactions that TWA challenged as anti-trust violations were under the Civil Aeronautics board's jurisdiction and by law were immune from anti-trust action.

The suit, filed by TWA in 1961, named Hughes as a defendant but he could never be located to be legally served as a party to the case. Toolco, a corporation wholly owned by Hughes, and Raymond Holiday, a toolco vice-president and TWA director, were the other defendants.

At that time, Toolco had a 78 per cent interest in TWA's outstanding stock and until six months previously had acted as supplier and lessor of planes to the airline.

Toolco sold its TWA stock in 1966.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Metzner's ruling and raised the interest from 6 to 7½ per cent. The Supreme Court decision reversed both lower courts.

Sahtlam Fire Tax Sought

DUNCAN — Sahtlam residents, who have had a volunteer fire department for three years, are seeking the Cowichan Valley Regional Board's help in raising money through taxation to maintain fire equipment.

Newly-elected regional chairman Margaret Robertson advised volunteer firemen Wednesday evening that they will have to provide a petition showing that a referendum has a good chance of passing before the regional district will hold one.

Residents in the district, about four miles west of Duncan, formed the department after two homes were lost because of the lack of fire protection.

The area involves 200 homes but spokesman Wayne O'Keefe said the district is willing to include Paldi in the fire protection district which will mean another 20 homes.

Since the department's inception residents have built a two-storey fire hall, with the second floor serving as a community centre, bought two pumper trucks and a pickup with a portable pump.

"This was all done through donations, pledges and volunteer labor", O'Keefe said.

He said the department needs $3,000 to maintain the equipment and wants the regional board to help put the referedum through as soon as possible so that "we can have an assessment."

DISCUSSING committee selections are newly-elected chairman of the Cowichan Valley Regional Board, North Cowichan alderman Margaret Robertson, and vice-chairman Ken Irving, Lake Cowichan alderman. Both were elected by acclamation at the board's inaugural meeting Wednesday evening. Irving was also elected by acclamation as chairman of the Regional District Hospital Board. Farm Freeze 'Must Go'

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture asked the provincial government on Wednesday to lift its freeze on the subdivision of farmland.

Representatives of the BCFA said after a meeting with Agriculture Minister David Stupich that their case was given a good reception but no commitment was given.

The government by order-in-council on Dec. 21 banned all subdivision of agricultural land until further notice, pending the introduction of legislation at the next legislative session.

A position paper presented to Stupich by the BCFA says the government "must lift the farmland freeze order" and replace it with legislation that only bans subdivision when the land is to be converted to non-agriculture use.

The farmers said such land being sold for non-farm use should be bought on a fair-refusal basis by the government at fair market value.

"Our membership has ordered us to receive your government's commitment in fact, on this method of preserving farmland. In the absence of your commitment any future discussions will be without value."

The BCFA siad it also wants a hand in setting policies to insure the recapture of "at least full costs of production."

This would involve removal of succession duties and gift taxes from family farms, when transferred within a family.

It would also involve removal of all property taxes not related to land services except for homesites.

TV Quiz To Visit Island

Seven high schools will participate in the CBC television quizz, Reach for the Top, at a four-day session of color videotaping in the MacPherson Playhouse next month.

The tapings will take place at 8 p.m. Feb. 5 to 8th inclusive and free tickets are available at the McPherson and the B.C. Telephone Co. 1321 Blanshard.

The winner of the contest will receive a $400 scholarship prize and enter the B.C. finals of the program later in the spring.

The B.C. champions will receive a $1,500 cash scholarship for their school and take part in the national finals in Ottawa next summer.

Tel Hits 20% Pay Hike Idea

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. said Wednesday its directors would be "extremely reluctant" to accept a contract settlemen proposal with 8,600 union employees as indicated by a federal conciliation officer.

A company statement said the officer, Douglas Cameron, gave some indication that a settlement with the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C. "might be reached on the basis of a 14-per-cent increase in wages across the board over two years, together with a 35-per-cent increase in the company pension formula.

"The combined cost of these two items alone would be more than 20 per cent of the current payroll which would have to be paid for out of subscribers' rates," the company said.

Trio Remanded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three Sons of Freedom women were remanded in custody to Feb. 26 when they appeared in provincial court Wednesday charged with arson at Shaughnessy Hospital.

Mary Astraforoff, Polly Chernoff and Vera Posnikoff argued before Judge Murray Hyde that they should not be charged with arson. "It was a ceremonial fire which all doukhobors set," they said through an interpreter.

Special Election

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A special election will be held in Chetwynd Feb. 24 to choose a mayor to replace Frank Oberle, recently-elected MP for Prince George-Peace River. Oberle's term as mayor expires later this year, but he submitted his resignation Jan. 1. No nomination papers have been filed for the job.

Heated Bridge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new $12 million bridge in Vancouver will have an electrically-heated driving surface, preventing freezing and eliminating the use of salt. Heating cables embedded in the bridge will be turned on automatically when the temperature drops. The bridge, to replace the Fraser Street bridge, will cross the north arm of the Fraser River linking Vancouver and Richmond. It is expected to be completed in the fall.

Water Bomb

VANCOUVER (CP) — Michael Dohnalek, 24, of West Vancouver, lost the use of two fingers on one hand after a water bomb dropped through his car windshield. He told police he was parking his car on a city street when a quart carton of water smashed through the windshield, cutting tendons in his arm.

Arm Broken

VANCOUVER (CP) — The father of a 17-year-old Vancouver youth, accidentally killed by a police bullet Nov. 28 claimed Wednesday that police broke his left arm Tuesday night while arresting him.

Arthur Teece, 45, said in an interview that a policeman broke his arm when putting him into a police van.

Securities Stolen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Harris, 45, a Vancouver importer, has asked police to help him find securities valued at $60,000 he says were stolen in a break-in. He said the door to his room was smashed, and the securities were taken from a coat pocket. He said there were six $5,000 bonds, and two trust company notes.

1973 Dodge Colt. Little but loaded.

COLT GT
2-Door Hardtop

Here's the new little car you've been looking for. Little in size, but loaded with features you might expect to pay extra for.

New Dodge Colt comes in five different models—coupe, 2-door hardtop, 4-door sedan, station wagon and the sporty new GT (illustrated).

Every New Dodge Colt is the result of extra care in engineering. Dodge builds in the solid difference, starting with unitized construction that combines body and frame in one solid unit. Then we load 'em up with the kind of features you want most—as standard equipment.

The new Dodge Colt has as standard, comfort features like high-backed bucket seats. Adjustable steering column. Flow-thru ventilation. Ample head and leg room. Beauty features like wood-grained console and instrument panel. Color-keyed interiors. The New Dodge Colt incorporates, as standard equipment, safety features like big disc brakes up front. Extra protection front and rear bumpers. Energy absorbing steering column. New emission control systems.

Naturally, you can equip your New Dodge Colt with optional features, too, like automatic transmission and radio. Feature for feature, inch by inch, Dodge builds in the solid difference. Innovative engineering, plus extra care in the way we put it all together, make us believe that your New Dodge Colt is the best little car ever built for Chrysler. It's little—but it's loaded.

Extra Care in Engineering... it makes the difference.

'Everything Went Blank,' Says Stabbing Accused

Ernest Lavern Hotvedt, 28, testified in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday he has no recollection of stabbing his wife Linda on Nov. 5.

"Everything went blank. The next thing I was conscious of was being in the city jail in a pair of coveralls. There were other people sitting there eating, and they were prisoners. A man gave me a coffee and then I realized something was wrong," he told the 12-man jury.

Hotvedt, charged with non-capital murder, was the first witness called by defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood after two and a half days of testimony given by Crown witnesses.

Representing the Crown is Alan Bigelow, assisted by Robert Edwards.

Hotvedt testified that he had been drinking continuously since about noon Nov. 4, the day before the fatal stabbing.

Later in the evening he went to the Army and Navy lounge, 1001 Wharf, where he spoke briefly with his wife. He said he did not remember leaving the premises.

He told the court he remembered seeing his wife at her home, 1255 Balmoral, later. He pleaded with her to come back and live with him and she became angry and asked him to leave.

The next thing he remembered was the city jail.

Hotvedt, a corporal in the Canadian Armed Forces, told the jury he married Linda March 31, 1970.

"She was everything to me — everything," said the accused.

"When I was in Cyprus in '70-'71 for six months my wife used to write me all the time," he said.

After the first two months the letters stopped coming, "and I loved my wife so much that I didn't believe she could be doing anything wrong. I didn't want to know anything was wrong," said Hotvedt.

Between Sept. 6, 1972, and Oct. 7, 1972, Hotvedt served in Wainright. During that period he received only one letter from his wife, he testified.

"When I got home, I drove up to the house and the house was empty. The furniture was gone and the children were gone," he said.

All that remained was a "bedroom suite, kitchen table, and an old radio." All the pictures of him and his wife were torn up and thrown on the floor, said the accused.

"There was no message, no note . . . I couldn't find her."

Two days later he located her and she told him she loved him but did not want to live with him.

Previous evidence showed that until the time of her death, Hotvedt saw her periodically and she had relationships with other men.

"It seemed like she was dangling me — dangling me on a string. I loved her so much I didn't care. I didn't care how bad I looked," Hotvedt testified.

Const. Richard Mitchell told the jury he arrived at the dead woman's home shortly after 7 a.m. Nov. 5.

When he entered the premises he saw Mrs. Hotvedt lying on the kitchen floor and a knife was sitting at the top of a staircase leading from the kitchen to the basement, he testified.

Const. Laurie Belfrey, who arrived shortly after Mitchell, told the court he saw a leather sheath on a chair.

He asked Hotvedt if it belonged to him and quoted him as saying, "Yes, I brought it with me."

Owen-Flood told the court he plans to call four more defence witnesses today.

ANOTHER BOO-BOO IN THAT CALENDAR

OTTAWA (CP) — The ill-fated Canada Post Office calendar that was called back recently for having too many days in February, now is being unbraided for ignoring St. Jean Baptiste Day.

Lionel Beaudouin (SC-Richmond) brought the omission to the attention of Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet in the Commons Wednesday.

The calendar was the subject of a commotion late last year when it had to be recalled because it gave 31 days to February.

Ouellet said the calendar is not "ordinary," but is designed to provide information about mailing dates and methods.

It is true that it neglects the holiday of French Canada's patron saint, Ouellet said, but it also ignores the Queen's birthday.

Contractors 'Discussed Bids on Hospital'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Plastering contractors bidding on a hospital job discussed their bids before submitting them, a contractor's office employee testified Wednesday.

Dorothy Will told a government inquiry into alleged improprieties in bidding for a contract for an extension to Campbell River General Hospital, that she was aware of several phone calls between her employer, Innes and Wolfe of Vancouver, and two other plasterers bidding on the job, Chalifour Bros. and Gallagher Bros.

She said she wrote to the government suggesting it investigate the tendering because her employer added about $100,000 to the original estimate of his costs for the job.

She said the firm originally calculated the costs of the 30-bed extension at $106,000, but increased the figure to $216,000 because it did not want the job.

The government estimate of the plastering job was $120,000 and the bid submitted by Chalifour was $201,723.

Mrs. Will said her employer, Mr. Innes, told her he thought Mr. Chalifour's figures were "exceptionally high" and rechecked his own figures. She said he arrived at a minimal difference, less than $2,000.

"Mr. Innes gave me a bid to put in and said he wasn't interested in the job so obviously if he put in this high bid he wouldn't get the job," she said.

"Mr. Innes and I spoke of Mr. Chalifour having an office on Vancouver Island and it would be better and simpler for Mr. Chalifour to do the job.

$13M Left

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A real estate developer who came to the U.S. from Poland as a penniless immigrant left an estate valued at $13 million, a probate appraisal showed. Samuel Hamburger died in 1971 at 86. His estate included stocks valued at $8.5 million.

Billion-Dollar Difference Finally Smoothed Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and the United States have finally succeeded in reconciling their contradictory statistics on trade between the two countries.

A joint committee was formed 13 months ago to iron out differences, which amounted to almost $1 billion for 1970.

Statistics Canada said Wednesday that the committee has agreed on $1.42 billion as Canada's merchandise trade surplus in 1970. Previously, U.S. figures set the surplus at $2.01 billion while Canadian statistics showed only $1.04 billion.

The discrepancy affected delicate U.S.-Canadian trade talks, since the United States claimed the balance of trade between the two countries was too much in Canada's favor.

Reasons for the billion-dollar discrepancy included customs department over-valuations of imports, under-valuation of exports and inconsistent evaluation procedure for such categories as natural gas, temporary imports and transportation charges.

Statistics Canada said it is the first time two major trading partners have reconciled their trade data.

McCarthy to Teach

NEW YORK (AP) — Former senator Eugene McCarthy has been appointed Adlai E. Stevenson professor of political science at the New School for Social Research, effective late this month. President John Everett of the New School said McCarthy will teach a graduate seminar on politics and literature.

Choir Heading for Britain

The Victoria Conservatory Senior Choir is planning to travel to Britain in the next few months.

To help establish a travelling fund, two young singers will join a group of well known young local artists in a concert Saturday.

The event will take place at 7:30 p.m. at St. Matthias Hall, corner of Richmond and Richardson.

The guests are soprano Madeleine Groos, recently returned home after study in Vienna, and contralto Linda Scanlan, vacationing from her studies at Trinity College in London.

Both are former pupils of Miss Gladys Pearcy who initiated the trip plans.

Miss Groos will be the soloist in Scarlatti's Cantata Pastorale which will be performed by the string quartet of David Harrington, first violin, Janet Doughty, second, Ann Patterson, Viola and Rolf Gilstein, cello with Walter Prossnitz at the harpsichord.

Among others contributing to the program will be Juliet Proudman, trumpet, Walter Prossnitz, piano, Debra Crozier-Smith, soprano, and Susan Pye, violin.

Beethoven's Sextette Op. 71 will be played by the Conservatory Wind Ensemble and the Conservatory Senior Choir and Junior Girls Ensemble will also perform.

Tickets will be available at the door.

Kings' Shutout Supports Brian

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Mr. Brian Shaw, the coach, apologizes if it sounds like he's bragging. He regards his Edmonton Oil Kings as the most complete team in the Western Canada Junior Hockey League.

And it's not just because the Oil Kings dealt Victoria Cougars their first shutout in Memorial Arena, 4-0, on Wednesday.

"We've got the best goaltending, the steadiest defence, and a pretty good attack," declared Shaw.

"Everybody figures we have a two-man team (Darcy) Rota and (John) Rogers. Yet Rota now has played the last two games without scoring a goal, but the team has managed to score eight.

"I thought the Cougars checked us very well tonight. I haven't seen a Victoria team ever check better, and it's a good thing because we might have scored a lot of goals tonight.

"As for goaltending, no other team has two as good as our two, Doug Soetart and Larry Hendrick.

"Calgary has a good one, but not two."

Soetart, afforded good protection most of the way, handled 29 stops in recording his first shutout. He made his biggest at the 19-minute mark of the second period on Dave Faulkner when the Victoria rookie centre went in on a clear-cut breakaway.

Soetart held his ground, forced Faulkner to make the first move, and then blocked the breakaway run. It was a 2-0 game, advantage to Edmonton, at that point.

Play promptly moved to the Victoria zone and Rogers scored to make it 3-0; and that virtually sealed the Oil Kings' victory and Cougars' fourth straight loss.

Rogers carried the scoring load for Oil Kings when Cougars assigned Frank Hyndman to shadow Rota. Rota was kept off the scoresheet, but it was Rogers who required attention.

In addition to his tide-turning goal, he did most of the work on centre Fred Comrie's two power-play goals. Terry McDonald, jumping out of the penalty box but with his team still playing shorthanded, scored Edmonton's first goal.

It's true the Cougars checked well. They got good goaltending from Danny Rogers, but most of Victoria's difficulty stemmed from a flat attack. Apart from Faulkner's breakaway, there wasn't much of a scoring threat exhibited by Cougars.

It was especially woeful when Cougars enjoyed an extra-man advantage through Edmonton penalties. The Cougars enjoyed a two-man edge early in the first period through successive penalties to Comrie and McDonald, but Victoria managed only one fair-dinkum scoring chance in the 55 seconds Edmonton was forced to go with only three men.

Cougars' sputtering offence suffered before the game started when speedy Al McLaren came up ailing. The sophomore winger was put through for a test for mononucleosis, a strength-sapping ailment.

Results of the test, said trainer Jack Anderson, are expected Friday.

McLaren's sickness means that Cougars will keep their roster intact with the 17 players who dressed Wednesday. Midnight was the deadline for free transfer of players between WCJHL teams and their two affiliates.

Oatman: A Name That Will Live in History

If it hadn't been for the fact that a corporal had sworn at anofficer, E. Ross Oatman might never have enjoyed one of his proudest moments in sport.

Ross Oatman is one of the Oatman brothers, who likely will be recalled by many as having contributed much to sport in days gone by, and if he wasn't as famous nationally as his hockey-playing brothers Eddie, and Russ, he still could wield a mean bat.

Yes, Ross Oatman was one of the diamond stars of the 20s in the city, a former batting champion. From his cupboard full of mementoes, including tennis trophies, this week he proudly displayed an old first baseman's glove, small by today's standards, and a baseball listing the B.C. championship team of 1928.

It was a case of yesterday revisited. The glove for instance was the one he wore when his battalion team, the 228th, won the baseball championship of France in 1918. And Ross wouldn't have played in the final, if it hadn't been for that errant corporal. Matter of fact he had been taken off the team because as a third baseman "I didn't have that much of an arm", and "I had lost a game earlier by a bad throw."

ROSS OATMEN . . . there a difference

However, in the next game, this corporal expressed his displeasure too brashly to the umpire, who happened to be an officer, and he was banished for all time. Oatman got to play, and one his clubmates was the memorable Duke Keats, who passed away here last year. "The Duke played second," he recalled.

Some Keepsakes and Titles

After the war, Ross made his home here, and later at Anyox, Stewart, Grand Forks and, finally, Kelowna before retiring nine years ago. Now, he lives at Brentwood.

It was in 1927 that he won the batting championship of the City Senior League with a .373 mark, and it was a year later that the Victoria Capitals won the B.C. senior B championship.

His keepsake ball labelled "Official League Ball, guaranteed 18 innings," lists the champions — Norm Forbes, Art Minnis, Art Webster, Herb Cummings, Jack McKenzie, Jim Dangerfield, Murty Dunn, Tommy Bowden, and Oatman.

Ross played only amateur hockey. "My brothers were better," he freely admitted. Eddie, who started junior hockey when he was only 13, was a professional with the old Victoria Cougars, member of the Quebec team which won the Stanley Cup in 1912, and had a 25-year pro career, surpassed in longevity only by that of Gordie Howe.

"And he isn't even in the Hockey Hall of Fame," said Ross. Eddie the "iron man" of hockey of his day, was once featured in Bob Ripley's Believe It or Not. He came west when Lester Patrick and his brother Frank started the professional league on the coast. For five seasons he played with the Cougars, and was the club captain.

Russ was a younger brother who joined the Cougars in 1925. After the Cougars lost the Stanley Cup playoff to Montreal Maroons, the league disbanded, and the Cougars were sold to Detroit in the big expansion of 1926. Russ, however, went to Montreal Maroons, where he achieved fame by firing home the winning goal in overtime in a two-game, total-goal Stanley Cup semi-final series, to beat the Maroons' hated rivals, the Canadiens.

On the Outside, Looking In

Russ died a few years ago, but Eddie, 83, is still living in Minneapolis.

Ross isn't certain if Eddie will ever get into the Hall of Fame. "But he has one backer," he said, producing a sports column written by George Hayes, a former NHL referee and linesman.

"For six years now, I have plugged . . . to get Eddie Oatman into the Hockey Hall . . . and the Canadian Sports Hall of Fame. . . ."

Hayes also added a note that perhaps all the Oatmans belong, as a family.

But apparently there is a hint of prejudice against Oatman (primarily because he came west), and Ross suggests that as long as one selector is on the board, then he won't make the Hall.

The same probably goes for Hayes. For George, who officiated in the NHL for 19 years, from 1946 to 1965, and worked in 1,513 games, isn't in the Hall either.

Then Ross fondled his old glove again:

"You know," he said, "the Duke (Keats) and I lived in the same tent, in France . . . it was quite a team . . ."

Kiwis Play It Cosy in the Snow

The New Zealand rugby players, opening their North American tour against Victoria Crimson Tide Wednesday at Centennial Stadium, got their first snow job and reacted predictably — they played it cosy.

The New Zealanders, members of the Petone Rugby Club of Wellington, refused to risk a running game on the cold and slippery footing, and relied mainly on the kicking of centre Richard Cleland for a 19-9 victory.

About 600 fans huddled in near-freezing temperatures to see the match, first of six for the Petone club. The team moves to San Francisco for two games there, plays two more in Los Angeles and completes its tour with a single game in Honolulu.

The visitors staged a haka, or Maori war dance, prior to the game but even that failed to warm up the weather and the Tide counted a penalty goal by Rob Hindson before the Kiwis could thaw out.

But once Cleland had limbered up there wasn't much doubt about the outcome, even though Victoria had the better of it in the scrum and came within inches of trys on three occasions.

Cleland connected on all five penalty-goal attempts for 15 points, missing only on the convert of Geoff Skipper's try. Petone led 16-3 at the intermission.

Cleland ran the count to 19-3 early in the second half and Crimson Tide closed out the scoring on Gillie Greig's try and playing coach Alan Rees' convert.

Referee — Jan Curnow, Victoria.

Three-Brother Act Possible For Stamps

CHICAGO (CP) — Canadian Football League teams took advantage of a new league rule Wednesday and named two players from their home areas who will be exempt from the CFL draft of college graduates.

Greg Fulton, CFL secretary, announced the list of protected players which were handed to him by officials of CFL teams who attended meetings here in conjunction with the American Football Coaches Association annual meeting.

Montreal Alouettes and Ottawa Rough Riders each selected only one player to protect from the draft and traded their second choices to other teams.

The Als, after protecting Idaho State tackle Pat Bonnett, traded, their second choice to British Columbia Lions who protected Robby Allen, a tackle from Bishops' University.

The Riders protected tackle Donn Smith from Purdue and traded their second choice to Winnipeg Blue Bombers who chose Wayne Ducharme, a running back with University of Windsor.

Winnipeg, after picking Ducharme on the choice of Ottawa, traded its first choice to Edmonton Eskimos who protected Rick McKay, a linebacker from North Dakota. The Blue Bombers' second choice was Simon Fraser tackle Roy Albertson.

The other team's picks:

Calgary's selection of Forzani could lead to the first three-brother act in the CFL since the Stukus brothers played for Toronto in the early 1930s.

Forzani's brother John is a Stampeder guard and brother Joe is a linebacker. The Argo brother act consisted of Bill, Frank and Annis Stukus.

Fulton confirmed earlier reports of other rule changes drafted at a rules committee meeting here. The changes require ratification by the CFL executive committee which meets Feb. 8 in Toronto.

Highlight of the rules changes was the decision to move the hash marks closer together, following a similar rule change in the National Football League last season.

Previously, the hash marks ran parallel to and 20 yards in from each sideline, leaving a 25-yard-wide zone down the middle of the field within which the ball was spotted for each down.

The new rule calls for the hash marks to be 24 yards from the sidelines, leaving only a 17-yard-wide strip down the middle.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish earned Jennie Buckley women's fivepin award in 12th week of annual Times. Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Jennie topped distaff fivepinners competing in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes as she rolled 206-235-356 — 797 series in Mixed Classic League at Town and Country Lanes.

Jets Starting To Pull Away

Times News Services

Winnipeg Jets are pulling away while New York Raiders are pulling up in World Hockey Association races.

The Jets padded their Western Division lead to seven points by defeating Alberta Oilers 6-1 Wednesday.

The Raiders, plagued by poor attendance, moved to within three points of front-running New England Whalers in the Eastern Division by dumping Philadelphia Blazers 4-1.

In Wednesday's only other game, three goals by Alton White sparked Los Angeles Sharks to an 8-5 victory over Chicago Cougars.

Rick Morris scored three times for Chicago.

An Untidy Affair

NEWPORT, Wales (CP) — The New Zealand All Blacks beat Newport, 20-15, in a brawling rugby union match Wednesday.

Both sets of forwards spent more time punching and mauling than actually running for the ball in the roughest and untidiest match of the New Zealanders' tour.

On one occasion, Newport's Jones and All Black Whiting were locked together on the ground for more than a minute with play on the other side of the pitch. The 20,000 fans shouted "off, off," but the refereee only gave the two players a lecture.

Sayers and Bryan Williams scored the All Black tries and Williams also kicked two of the four penalty goals. Morris, the full-back, landed the other two penalties.

WEEKEND SKI REPORT

Fresh snow and freezing temperatures have created promising weekend conditions at both Vancouver Island ski areas. Forbidden Plateau today reported snow falling in 30-degree temperatures. There were 28 inches of base at the top and eight inches at the bottom with 10 inches of new snow. Conditions were good in powder snow. Chains are mandatory. Green Mountain also reported snow falling with three to four inches of new on a 32-inch base at the top and an 18-inch base at the bottom. Chains are mandatory here, too.

Gold Rush in California Lures Two Victoria Drivers

Roy Smith, driving a 1972 Chevelle owned by Dick Midgley of Victoria, will attempt to qualify in the Winston Western 500, first race on the National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) Grand National circuit this season.

Smith will have next Thursday, Friday and Saturday to qualify for the event, which carries a $100,000 purse.

Ross Surgenor, meanwhile, will be behind the wheel of a 1969 Torino owned by Gus Stanfield of Victoria in a bid for a berth in the Permatex 200 Jan. 20. Surgenor has only next Saturday to qualify for one of the 40 spots on the starting grid. More than 100 drivers have entered.

Flames Make It Hot Everywhere

By the Canadian Press

Bernie Geoffrion's year-long program to make believers of his fledgling Atlanta Flames is paying off not only at home, but just about everywhere else in the National Hockey League.

The surprising Georgians won again Wednesday night, upsetting Chicago Black Hawks in front of 11,829 screaming fans to climb into a second-place tie with Minnesota North Stars in the West Division—just seven points behind Chicago.

"You wouldn't believe it," Atlanta general manager Cliff Fletcher was saying recently. "These people have never seen hockey before, but they really love it.

"Once they get the feel of it, you couldn't keep them in their seats."

Atlanta fans had reason to cheer against Chicago as the Flames moved into a 4-0 lead on two second-period goals by John Stewart and two by rookie Jacques Richard 50 seconds apart early in the third.

The Flames have won 18, lost 19 and tied seven in 44 starts.

Elsewhere, Montreal Canadiens romped 6-0 over Minnesota North Stars as Henri Richard broke a season-long drought with two goals, Detroit Red Wings edged Pittsburgh Penguins 2-1, Toronto Maple Leafs downed New York Islanders 4-2 and California Golden Seals nipped St. Louis Blues 6-5.

New York Rangers visit Buffalo Sabres tonight in a battle for third in the East while Boston Bruins entertain Minnesota and Los Angeles Kings visit Philadelphia Flyers.

Richard, blanked in 37 games this season, scored at the 38-second mark of the game at Minneapolis and then gave Canadiens a 2-0 lead in the second after a rink-length dash.

Both scores were set up by defenceman Serge Savard with whom the 36-year-old veteran had feuded earlier in the season.

Frank Mahovlich, 35 Wednesday, celebrated with two goals against Stars' Cesare Maniago as Montreal padded its East lead to five points over Boston.

Lou Nanne was given a game misconduct in the first period when he became involved in a minor skirmish between Minnesota teammate Jude Drouin and Montreal's Bob Murdoch.

Mickey Redmond and Bill Collins, who went to Detroit in the trade that sent Mahovlich to Montreal two years ago, scored in the second period at Pittsburgh to lift the Red Wings to a 2-0 lead.

Redmond set up a penalty shot in the first period when he threw his stick at Penguin's Ron Schock on a breakaway. Schock, man-on-man with Detroit goaltender Roy Edwards, was unable to beat the Wings' veteran.

The Maple Leafs saddled the visiting Islanders with their ninth straight loss, paced by Paul Henderson's two goals. Toronto rolled to a 3-0 lead then coasted the remainder of the way, firing 48 shots at New York goalie Gerry Desjardins who spent much of the third period clearing his own rebounds.

Stan Weir and Craig Patrick each had two goals for California, but Hilliard Graves fired the winner at 4:43 of the final period after the Blues' Jack Egers had hit his second of the game to make the score 5-4.

Arizona State Grad Goes First in Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's annual winter draft of free-agent prospects was about halfway through its opening round Wednesday when the conference telephone connection linking the 24 major league clubs broke down in Oakland.

When the man from the Athletics rejoined the conversation, he asked for a rundown of the half dozen or so selections he had missed. As Johnny Johnson, administrative assistant to commissioner Bowie Kuhn, reeled off the names, the Oakland man interrupted him with a puzzled question.

"How come," he asked, "I don't have any of these guys on my list?"

One guy on just about everybody's list was Arizona State shortstop Alan Bannister and Philadelphia Phillies, drafting first, claimed him in a hurry and then signed the youngster for "a substantial bonus."

Was it as substantial as the reported $100,000 the young shortstop turned down from California a few drafts ago?

"You can assume it's close to that," said Bannister.

"He can run, hit and field," said Combs. "He has a lot of things going for him. I wouldn't be surprised if he makes it now."

Pitchers and infielders dominated the draft's opening round. Of the 24 first round selections, 13 were pitchers and seven were infielders including Wayne Benson of Del Rio, Tex., chosen by Chicago Cubs and listed as an infielder-outfielder.

A total of 250 players were selected with 148 picked in the regular phase and 102 in the secondary phase.

The oldest player chosen was pitcher Jim Johnson, a righthander from Lonoke, Ark., selected by New York Mets. He was 21 last Aug. 23, 12 days before Bannister reached that age.

The youngest player selected was Michael Norris, a righthanded pitcher from San Francisco, who was taken by Oakland.

Indians Lose Gabe to Yanks

Yankee president Michael Burke and Cleveland shipbuilder George M. Steinbrenner III, front men for a syndicate that bought the American League club from the Columbia Broadcasting System last week for $10 million, unveiled their partners at a news conference in New York.

Except for Paul and Francis J. "Steve" O'Neill, a major Indians' stockholder, the other owners are not associated with baseball.

The Indians promptly named 55-year-old Phil Seghi to succeed Paul as vice-president and general manager. Seghi had been a vice-president and director of player personnel since 1971.

Paul, 62, who was an executive with Cincinnati Reds and general manager in Houston before joining the Indians 12 years ago, said he would have no title with the Yankees.

Steinbrenner, however, indicated that Paul's extensive background in the baseball world would not be wasted. He said that with Paul joining Burke and general manager Lee MacPhail, the Yankees "will be a stronger group."

Burke, who also was Yankees president under CBS ownership, said there would be no changes in club management and that despite the large number of out-of-town investors the team would stay in New York.

Paul said he wasn't given the final go-ahead to join the Yankee organization until only hours before the news conference.

After reaching agreement with Indians owner Nick Milenti, Paul said he met with commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"We have a complete understanding," he said. "I have divested myself of all interest in the Indians except for the stock, which will be sold at the earliest opportunity. Meanwhile it will be held in escrow."

O'Neill also will sell his Indians stock.

Tag-Team Trios On Mat Card

Tag-team competition involving three-man combinations will feature a professional wrestling program Thursday, Jan. 18, at Memorial Arena.

Bulldog Brown, The Brute and Mike Webster will work together against the trio of Sean Regan, Dean Higuchi and Johnny Quinn in the main bout.

ALLEN PACT EXTENDED

Gloomy Film Gets a Second Chance

A controversial National Film Board documentary rejected in December by film board chairman Sydney Newman will get a second chance to prove itself in six or eight weeks.

But to win approval it will have to have modified its sombre tone, said Newman in an interview Wednesday.

The documentary, called Vingt-Quatre Heures ou Plus — Twenty-Four Hours or More, was rejected because it advocated the overthrow of the entire political and economic system in Canada, he said.

"The film showed no redeeming factors in our society at all," Newman said.

If director Gilles Groulx, who made the film on a freelance basis for the National Film Board, wants to get Newman's approval, some of the pessimism will have to be modified.

Since Newman became chairman in August 1970, he has tried to impress on the film board's 75 directors that they are "in a sense servants of the public." They cannot make any film they choose to when the Canadian taxpayer is footing the bill.

That bill is about $13 million a year, of which $9 million is spent on film production and the rest on distribution.

Hollywood could make one blockbuster like Fiddler on the Roof with that money. The film board's staff of 950 make 140 films a year, everything from Norman McLaren's brilliant animated films to feature films like the acclaimed Mon Oncle Antoine.

Newman said the film board has a special budget, "in the millions," for its biggest current project.

It is beginning production of 60, 20-minute films, half of them for people learning to speak French, and the other half for people learning to speak English.

"We're doing these in the form of fictional stories," he said.

Different groups of films will be geared for different levels of language proficiency.

The board of governors, which moves to Vancouver's Bayshore Inn Friday for the second day of its meeting, will take a special interest in the creation of regional production offices, said Newman.

At present Vancouver has the only regional production office, and until a few months ago it hadn't staff or funds to do too much. Now, however, it has both and films are being made in the province.

A second regional production office will open April 1 in Halifax "on a much more modest basis," said Newman.

Offices in Toronto and on the prairies are planned for coming years. The board has 28 distribution offices across Canada, including a Victoria office which distributes up to 1,400 films a month on Vancouver Island.

Troupe Sets Saturday Workshops

A series of Saturday theatre workshops will be launched this week by Company One, following the success of a similar series in october.

The three workshops will take place at St. George's Church old parish hall, 2580 Maynard Street, Cadboro Bay.

There will be three two-hour sessions this Saturday and on Jan. 20 and 27.

Movement for the performer at senior secondary and adult levels will be the subject at 10 a.m. At noon the workshop will concentrate on theatre games and improvisation for senior secondary students and adults and at 2 p.m. the same for junior secondary students.

Registration will be limited to 20 per workshop.

GOULD
. . . new father

BRUNICO, Italy — The town council has told Michael Windig, 56, to stop spending the night atop the parish church's bell tower, as he has done for the past 17 years, thus ending the 700-year-old tradition of a night fire guard.

"It was a tradition which cost too much," said Calogero Barbara, the town's chief accountant. "We promised Windig a new job."

The fire guard earned the equivalent of $221 a month.

GASTONIA, N.C. — Looking for white teeth in white snow was as hard as looking for a needle in a haystack.

But Jason Gaines' friends found them. And a dentist and an orthodontist replanted the four front teeth the 11-year-old son of a lawyer lost in a sledding accident.

The dentist said it was unfortunate that it was an hour and a half before he received them.

"The quicker you get them back in, the better. But since they were in the snow, n ot in the dirt, and not dried out, perhaps that's not too bad."

TORONTO — Dr. Raymond Parker, 69, who 30 years ago led a team of scientists that discovered a drug making possible the production of Salk polio vaccine, was invested Wednesday with the Medal of Service of the Order of Canada. He received the medal from Governor-General Roland Michener while in a wheelchair at Toronto General Hospital, where he is recuperating from an illness.

Gould was divorced in 1971 from Barbra Streisand, his wife of seven years. They had one son, Jason.

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Moira Shearer, former ballerina who starred in the film, The Red Shoes, has been injured with her three children in a multi-vehicle crash 34 miles south of here.

Police said Miss Shearer was in satisfactory condition at Edinburgh's Royal Infirmary. Her children were taken to Peel hospital at Gallasiels.

PRESTON, England — The local subsidiary of Unigate Dairies applied for a licence so its milkmen can deliver beer with the morning milk.

A company spokesman said Tuesday that if the experiment succeeds, it may be expanded to all 7,000 Unigate routes in the country.

SANTA MARTA, Colombia — Anibal Ceballos Camargo, news director of a local radio station, has asked authorities to grant him permission to grow marijuana so he can prove that it has many proper uses.

"Marijuana can serve to make textile, rope of high quality, low cost anesthetics, combustible oil, and poultry food that will increase by 100 per cent the production of eggs," he told the local mayor. There was no immediate comment from the mayor.

Beam Saves Worker

EDMONTON (CP) — A concrete beam has been credited with saving the life of Tim Dunham, a 23-year-old Calgary demolition worker who was trapped in tons of rubble Wednesday when three floors of a building collapsed on him.

Dunham was rescued from the remains of the agency building on Jasper Avenue after the fire department crews worked 90 minutes to free him from 150-pound blocks of concrete. He suffered only a broken leg.

"He had angels around his head," said fire department captain John Mohs after the rescue.

Dunham told rescuers he had entered the main floor of the building to make a telephone call from a work site trailer parked inside. He heard the building falling, took one step, then everything above him caved in.

The 60-year-old building was being demolished to make way for a new structure.

Strom Finished

CALGARY (CP) — Harry Strom, who leaves the Alberta Social Credit leadership next month, said Tuesday he is considering a complete withdrawal from provincial politics before the next election.

"I knew I was going to resign as leader before the current government term ended in 1975 and even before the 1971 election.

" . . . it isn't because we lost the last election. It isn't because of pressure I decided to resign the leadership. But it's best I do so before the pressure starts to make itself felt."

New Wheat Tested

SASKATOON (CP) — Two promising new strains of bread and utility wheats are in the final stages of testing although they probably will not be ready for release this year, E. D. Mallough of Regin, said Wednesday.

Mallough, head of the federal agriculture department's research station seeds section, told a Farm and Home Week audience at the University of Saskatchewan that if the new varieties pass the final testing stage they could possibly be ready for distribution next year.

One is a bearded bread wheat with better resistance to leaf rust than manitou or neepawa. The other is a white utility wheat with a high yield potential.

Farmer Aid Urged

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Wildlife Federation has asked the provincial government to consider giving compensation to farmers who preserve natural wildlife habitat on their farms. Officials of the federation met with Resources Minister Sidney Green to present a brief based on the group's annual convention last June.

Don Muir, past president of the federation, said one of the main points in the brief was the proposal that farmers be compensated for preservation of wildlife habitat.

Firm Aid Studied

CALGARY (CP) — The provincial government is considering taking over an Edmonton trucking firm's debts and improving management, Fred Peacock, minister of industry and commerce, said Wednesday. The future of Continental Express Lines, which operates between Vancouver and Montreal, was placed in doubt last month when the Alberta Supreme Court rejected its application for an amended method of paying creditors.

Self-Service Eyed

WINNIPEG (CP) — The chairman of the Manitoba Liquor Commission hopes eventually to have all liquor outlets in Winnipeg operating on a self-serve basis. J. Frank Syms said of the 14 outlets in the city, nine are self-serve. The five conventional-type outlets would be converted when circumstances permit.

$75M Land Bank Aid Sought

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer will fly to Ottawa Jan. 20 to press his request that the federal government provide $75 million for a provincial land bank.

The bank, started in early December, is a plan to buy property to provide low-cost housing and at the same time combat escalating prices of ordinary housing.

"If we can pick up enough land we can control the developers," said Lorimer.

"We will certainly have an influence on prices."

The federal government provided an initial $5 million in December to launch the land acquisition program in Greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria.

So far only one piece of land in Victoria, 4.3 acres of municipal property on McCaskill St. in Victoria West, has been bought for the land bank.

LORIMER

"We're looking at other sites in the Greater Victoria area," said Lorimer, but no purchases have been completed.

When further federal grants or loans have been settled, property in other parts of British Columbia will be added to the land bank, he said.

Only a fraction of each piece of land being bought — perhaps 15 or 20 per cent — will be used for subsidized low-income housing, he said. The rest will be leased to ordinary families at reasonable prices that will give stiff competition to private land developers.

The result, said Lorimer, will be to have subsidized housing mixed completely in with ordinary housing, not set out in big complexes like Blanshard Court.

"No one in Greater Victoria will know where it (the low income housing) is," Lorimer said, because it will be integrated.

Schools Gear for Strike Hoping It Won't Happen

ONE-CENT INCREASE in gas prices requires adjustment to pumps at Victoria gas stations including Causeway Esso Service, Government and Wharf, where Mark Hinson dials in the new prices — 53.9 cents per gallon for regular, 58.9 premium. Other gas firms are following Imperial Oil's lead in raising prices one cent per gallon. (Irving Strickland photos.)

Contingency plans have been made by the Greater Victoria School District for a possible strike by 269 blue-collar employees.

But district superintendent A. J. Longmore said today the administration is hoping that differences with Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will be worked out at a meeting Sunday called by mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

Some principals have been advising students to listen to radio stations Monday morning for instructions in the event a strike has begun.

The union, which is seeking a new contract to replace the one which expired Dec. 31, is free to strike but is not expected to until the results of Sunday's meeting are known.

"We are quite hopeful we can come up with a settlement," said Longmore.

What the administration has said to principals is that, if differences are not solved, "and if we find on Monday morning or any morning that the union has decided to follow its legal prerogatives, we will advise parents and students between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. on radio on what should be done."

Longmore said the administration "has been planning, should the eventuality take place." He said the administration would be "remiss if we waited to Monday and then said: What shall we do now." But he again said the district wants to reach a settlement.

He declined to spell out specifics in contingency plans because it would "not be good for management and employee relations."

School district officials made it clear earlier that they will try to keep schools open in the event of a strike. One of the keys is the heating system at each school. Newer furnaces with automatic controls require little supervision, but older furnaces need manual operation.

Liquor 'Advisers' To Replace Board

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today he expects the government to do away with the one-man Liquor Control Board and replace it with an advisory board that will consult the public on important decisions.

The attorney-general said he could not make an announcement but agreed that the one-man board system was inadequate.

An advisory board would hold public hearings and make recommendation on such innovations as neighborhood pubs, Macdonald said.

Macdonald's statement was expected in view of past complaints by the New Democratic Party, when in opposition, about the autocratic way in which the LCB operates.

The "board" in fact consists of only one man, William Bruce, who has held the job of chairman since 1969 although he was only confirmed in the post by the Social Credit government in April, 1971.

The Morrow liquor inquiry commission recommended a three-man liquor board be established and that its hearings be held in public.

It deplored the fact that there is no appeal from decisions of the board by individuals or companies who may feel they have been unjustly treated, and called for a process of appeals to the courts.

But nothing was ever done about implementing these and other recommendations of the commission — including the proposal for neighborhood pubs.

Barrett Seeks Gas Price Talks

Premier Barrett said today he has asked for a meeting Jan. 23 with representatives of Imperial Oil Limited.

Although Barrett would not say so, it is expected he will discuss recent announcements by Imperial and other major oil companies in Canada that prices of their fuel are about to go up.

The premier was asked before entering a cabinet meeting if the government intends to proclaim legislation passed by the former Social Credit administration which would give the provincial government the power to control prices of fuel in B.C.

He would only repeat that he has a meeting arranged with Imperial. But he added that the meeting was arranged at his request.

Asked about the price increases announced by the oil companies, Mines and Petroleum Minister Leo Nimsick said gasoline should be treated as a utility.

"To me gasoline is a utility and should come under the same situation as other utilities. It should be governed by the Public Utilities Act," Nimsick said.

He agreed that this system would involve price increases only after public hearings were held.

Asked if the provincial government has the competence to treat gasoline as another utility, Nimsick said: "Certainly, we can get the competence to do anything."

GAS 5c CHEAPER ACROSS THE BORDER

Gasoline prices appear to be about 5 cents per gallon cheaper in Bellingham than in Victoria, according to a spot check at service stations in both cities today.

Imperial Esso service stations are increasing their prices to 53.9 for regular gasoline on the heels of a 1 cent per gallon wholesale price increase by Imperial Oil.

In Bellingham, meanwhile, a major Chevron Standard station said Standard Oil stations there were selling gasoline for an average price of 40 cents regular and 44 cents premium.

Gallons in the United States are only four-fifths as large as Canadian gallons.

A gallon of gas in Victoria sells at 53.9 regular minus about 15 cents for taxes for a retail price of 38.9 cents.

The same product in the United States sells for 40 cents, minus 13 cents for taxes, or 27 cents.

If the Bellingham gallon was the same size as the Canadian gallon, the gas would be selling for 34 cents plus taxes while the Victoria gallon sells for 38.9 cents per gallon plus taxes.

The difference is 4.9 cents more per gallon in Victoria.

SCARF BLAMED

A long scarf was blamed for a freak motorcycle accident which slightly injured two persons Wednesday.

Police said Barbara Bravenber, 19, of 3764 South Raymond, was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by David Fleming, of 1246 Montrose, at about 4 p.m. Wednesday when her scarf caught in the rear wheel of the bike. Miss Bravenber and Fleming were thrown from the motorcycle.

City Misses Island Snow Storm

Worst of Winter, Police Say

Victoria escaped unscathed Wednesday night while almost all the rest of Vancouver Island slithered on roads made treacherous by heavy snow.

Although a little snow fell in the outer areas of Greater Victoria it had turned to rain by midnight. At Brentwood three inches of snow fell and there was one inch on the ground at Keating Cross Road.

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie observed today:

"This time we came out on top."

Road conditions in Port Alberni were so bad that some policemen were forced to abandon highway patrols. An RCMP spokesman described them as "as bad as they've been all winter."

Downtown Campbell River and much of the surrounding streets were turned into a shambles as snow and abandoned cars caused snarl-ups.

Fog compounded the problem at Duncan, combining with snow to reduce visibility to about 40 feet.

Police, in all these areas, urged motorists to stay at home. Good snow tires and/or chains were mandatory.

Although many car accidents were reported throughout the island no injuries were reported.

Although the front of the bus, driven by Nanoose resident Joseph Ordano, was badly damaged, both he and the passengers escaped unhurt. The men aboard were American technicians and servicemen using the Canadian armed forces torpedo testing range at Nanoose.

Nanaimo, Ladysmith and Courtenay reported snow falls of between three to six inches. While road conditions were described as varying from fair to poor they didn't deteriorate to the point of being treacherous.

As warmer air moved over Vancouver Island today the snow turned to rain in many areas making roads slushy.

"There is no high tide and the river is low, so as long as the system can take the water there should be no problem," he said.

A provincial highways official described roads in the Cowichan Valley as being in fair winter condition. If people drive defensively they should have no problems, he added.

The traffic-paralysing snowstorms that ended a 10-day cold snap were repeated on the mainland. About an inch of wet snow on the lower mainland triggered a string of highway accidents between Clearbrook and Aldergrove on highway 401.

A freeway patrol spokesman reported both east and westbound lanes blocked for two hours by a series of accidents involving 20 trucks and cars. There were no serious injuries. Damage was estimated at $43,000 in the pile-up, $38,000 of it to a trailer-truck that jack-knifed.

There, too, today warmer temperatures and a steady drizzle were reducing the snow to slush.

Rain over the Greater Victoria area should ease by tonight but heavier rain is forcast for the weekend.

Winds will remain brisk, about 25 miles-an-hour southeasterlies, with small craft warning being posted for both the Strait of Georgia and the Juan de Fuca Strait.

Chaos—Then a Healthy Attitude Towards Sex

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — The United States is heading toward a Scandinavian style of more permissive, free and easy sexual behavior.

Before that happens, it is likely to be saturated with so much pornography and obsession with sex that a good many Americans are likely to get fed up.

In the end, the country will be better off for the change.

These, roughly, are the predictions of some people who should know on this, the more or less official 25th anniversary of what is quite vaguely known as the sexual revolution.

The people at the Institute for Sex Research on the campus of Indiana University here did not even know the silver anniversary was coming up until a reporter mentioned it.

Dr. Paul H. Gebhard, the institute's director, twitched his Hussar-style moustache and said, "We'll have to buy a bottle of something and break it out."

Tract Scientific

It was on Jan. 5, 1948, that the publishing firm of W. B. Saunders, specializing in medical textbooks, offered to a select clientele of medical and sociological professionals an 804-page scientific tract prepared by a group of researchers based on the Hoosier campus.

The first printing was for just 20,000 copies and the asking price was a stiff, for that time, $6.50. It became one of the best known books of this century, but few now can recall its exact title.

Mention The Kinsey Report, though, and most people will know what you are talking about — even if they are not able to spell out Sexual Behavior in the Human Male, by Kinsey, A.C.; Pomeroy, W.B.; and Martin, C.E.

It was the book which told in intricate detail how people in America engage in sex, with whom, with what sexes, how late in life and how early.

It was far more than an everything you wanted to know about sex book. It was an everything you didn't know and now are seeing in print for the first time book.

It was the book which started Americans — and people around the world — talking and thinking about sex in a manner they had never done before.

It was the book which in many ways made sex research respectable, clearing the ground for more recent eye poppers such as Masters' and Johnson's Human Sexual Response.

If anyone or anything is to be blamed for putting movies in the neighborhood theater you could have been arrested for seeing a few years ago, Kinsey and his work are a good place to start.

Alfred Charles Kinsey died in 1956, largely the victim of his own stubborn but vulnerable character, his weakened heart and charges that his work was an insult to American womanhood and a tool of communist machinations to soften the moral fibre of America.

If Kinsey's name hangs on in the memory of most Americans over 30, the Institute for Sex Research, it was never called the Kinsey Institute), does not. That is just as well with the researchers in Bloomington, who are quite happy they have stopped shocking people.

Work Continues

That does not mean they have stopped Kinsey's work. They are still at it, on a budget of more than $200,000 a year, largely supplied by the government.

If, for some reason, you were sitting in a homosexual bar a year or so ago in Indianapolis, Chicago or San Francisco and the person on the next stool began asking about your sex life, he (or she) might have had a personal motive. Or he (or she) might have been an emissary from the institute, interested in nothing more than a long talk, conducted along the strictest principles of scientific polling.

This is the current major enterprise of the institute — a behavioral study of homosexuals based on 1,000 separate interviews and due for publication next year.

After more than a quarter century's preoccupation with sex (Kinsey and his associates began research on Sexual Behavior in the Human Male in 1946 and Kinsey had been at it, largely on a one-man basis, since 1938) the senior members of the institute think with justice they have a fair idea of what has been happening in regard to their subject.

Gebhard, an anthropologist who joined the Kinsey team in 1946, sized it up:

"I think we're going to end up something like Scandinavia," he said. "This is a model which, by and large, strikes me as a reasonably healthy one.

"For a while we'll go through this chaos, this obsessive interest in sex, flooded with pornography. Then I think we'll get a little bit fed up with it and settle down and things will probably be healthier in the long run.

"There hasn't been a revolution in terms of behavior, because in my mind the term revolution means something rapid, rough. Really, what's happened is there's been a continuation of pre-existing trends, things that we can see beginning at the start of this century.

"However, in terms of the mass media the changes have been abrupt enough to call it a revolution. when you stop to think that we still have things locked up in our cabinets that you can now buy at the local drugstore, that's a revolution.

"I can remember, when our first book came out some journalist came in and said, 'I'm sorry, we can't even write a story about this. You can't put words like masturbation in a family newspaper.'

"Over 25 years we have become by and large healthier. These things that we used to try to sweep under the carpet are now out in the open and we're confronted with realities. I can't think how the individual or society can come to any satisfactory solution of their problems if they're struggling in an atmosphere of ignorance.

"We'd better learn what's going on if we're going to get the answers.

"One of the things that's hard to tell is what is cause and what is effect. For example, Kinsey himself and the institute. I don't think we're responsible for these sexual changes. That would be too egotistical. I think we were the result of a great trend that was moving.

"If Kinsey hadn't existed there would have been someone like him sooner or later. I think, however, one can say that he was in advance of his time, and he did accelerate the trend, definitely.

"I think he moved things by 10 years of something like that; which is an enormous impact for one man."

Gebhard was generous enough to assign something of the same sort of role to Playboy magnate Hugh Hefner, whose H. M. Hefner Foundation is listed by the institute as one of its more noted benefactors.

Battle Won

Wryly, but with a touch of respect, Gebhard recalled how Hefner, his editors and his lawyers, moving "very calculatedly, very cleverly," first won "the battle of the breast" and then censors' acceptance of the showing of pubic hair.

Hefner and his competitors in the slick girlie magazine game "certainly pick up what the public's interested in and reinforce that interest," Gebhard said.

"But I think they also mold it in that they keep pushing it a little bit. I think Hefner is a result again of this trend toward liberalization of sexualization. And because of his energy and because of the size of his circulation, he is probably accelerating things faster than they would have been had he not existed."

Gebhard was unreserved in his regard for the St. Louis-based team of Dr. William H. Masters and Virginia Johnson, whose report on how sex actually works raised almost as many hackles as the first Kinsey reports on sexual behavior on men and women.

"We've learned more about the physiology of sex in the last 10 years since Masters and Johnson than we've known in all the preceding time," Gebhard said. "We're complimentary but we scarcely overlap at all. Bill (Masters) is chiefly in the physiology business of it. We deal just in behavior and attitudes.

(Masters, interviewed by UPI correspondent Donald Berns in St. Louis, was reverential in his priaise for the original Kinsey reports, but had reservations about what has happened in Bloomington since.

("The Kinsey Report is a quarter of a century out of date," he said, "and the tragedy is that there haven't been any similar studies since that time. It would be of even more value if someone were to repeat the study now.

("We are not qualified to follow up on Kinsey's work. I think very few people would have the drive to do such an in-depth study. The Kinsey studies are a landmark, but it will become less of a landmark if it i snot followed up.

("I doubt very seriously if we could have done our work if Kinsey had not broken the ice. We would not have been able to pursue our intimate studies if Kinsey had not made the pathfinding studies.")

Survey Enormous

To this, Gebhard commented, "What he means is someone ought to do an enormous survey of the general population, which has never been done since Kinsey. We've gone on but we've been doing specialized projects.

"We have never tried an across the board national survey. It could be done, but it would be enormously expensive I think right now if you went out and tried to take a random sample of the whole population, you'd have a fantastically high refusal rate."

"Apparently we've just scratched the surface of this," Gebhard says. "Some people will say of sex research, 'When are you going to be finished with this?' To me it's like asking a chemist, 'When are you going to be through with chemistry?'

Alcohol More Popular; Illicit Drug Use Falls

TORONTO (CP) — Alcohol gained in popularity with Metropolitan Toronto students over the last two years while illicit drug use remained stable, the Alcohol and Drug Addiction Research Foundation revealed Wednesday.

The foundation released a statement showing that, based on a survey of 6,641 students in Grades 7, 9, 11 and 13, marijuana use rose to about 21 per cent, compared with 18 per cent in 1970.

The survey revealed that the use of other illicit drugs, such as LSD, opiates, speed and solvents, had either stayed the same or decreased.

This was in sharp contrast to two previous surveys of Metro students taken by the foundation which showed the use of some of these drugs had tripled between 1968 and 1970.

Alcohol continued to be the number one drug chosen by students, increasing by about 10 per cent between 1970 and 1972.

Seventy-one per cent of the students surveyed reported consuming alcohol at least once a month, with 23 per cent claiming they drank four or more times a month, the report said.

The foundation said much of the increase in the use of alcohol could be attributed to the 1971 lowering of the legal Ontario drinking age to 18 from 21.

About 41 per cent of the students in Grades 9, 11 and 13 claimed they drank as frequently before the law was changed as they do now, 20 per cent reported an increase, four per cent a decrease, nine per cent said they started drinking after the law was changed and the remainder said they were non-drinkers.

James Lambros plans to improve quality of jail food

Back to Jail—to Work

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) Last month James Lambros marched out of the county jail a free man after serving a six-month sentence. The next day he was back — as head chef.

And jail authorities are crediting the 24-year-old Lambros with ending a long string of prisoner disturbances over food quality.

"As an inmate, and talking to other inmates, I knew firsthand what the gripes were about the food," Lambros said in an interview this week. "It was too starchy and tasteless and repetitive."

Now his ingenuity — coupled with a $149,000 increase in the jail's food budget — have ended prison gripes about the food, Chief Deputy Sheriff William Davis said.

Lambros said much of the problem was lack of variety and unimaginative dishes, so that "the inmates knew, for example, that every Monday they'd have hot dogs and beans for dinner, then every Friday they'd have fishcakes, served half frozen."

Now they get fried chicken or roast beef at least once a week, and a typical breakfast might include French toast and sausage patties.

"This isn't gourmet cooking," Lambros said. "We're operating within our prescribed budget. But it's not so much what you cook as how you cook it."

Before the judge sent him off to jail last July, he recommended that prison officials make Lambros head trusty cook.

While serving his term, Lambros wrote a 17-page report on how the food could be improved through proper menu planning, preparation and nutrition analysis. Still, he said he was surprised when he was offered a permanent job upon his release Dec. 5.

Lambros said he turned down an offer of a higher paying job so he could continue being chief cook for his former fellow convicts.

"I enjoy my work," he said.

"I believe in what I'm doing and that what I am doing is needed."

Bird's Eye View of Business World

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Students submerged in high school theory are anxious to get a piece of on-the-job career action, judging from applications received by a work experience program.

Of 1,650 secondary school students who applied to the program — sponsored jointly by the local Chamber of Commerce and Greater Victoria School Board — 60 want a bird's eye view of stewardessing and 40 want to have a look at law.

Other careers that appear popular are architecture, 24; police work, 45; pilots, 32; social workers, 46; nursing, 33; and elementary teaching, 29.

There were only two applications for on-the-job training in secondary school teaching, 19 for chefs, 10 for carpenters, 11 for longshoremen and 10 for cosmetics field.

The program, which begins again this month and enables students to start learning the ropes of the business world, may be as short as two hours or as long as three weeks.

Walter Donald, a school board trustee and director of the Chamber of Commerce, said the program, now in its third year, attempts to give students some basis upon which to choose a career.

Defeats Criticisms

"It's only one of our programs which defeats criticisms levelled by parents, pupils and the general public, that education lacks practical application," said A. J. Longmore, Greater Victoria's schoolboard district superintendent.

The work experiences — using the atmosphere and working offices of 500 businesses and industries — cover a wide spectrum of vocations, said Longmore.

"Students have picked out the career areas they are interested in and what we're doing is trying to get together groups from different segments of the community to try and find places for them to go," said Donald.

"It gives them some basis for a future focus.

View Operation

"The program also attempts to place students in a position where they can see the whole operation. In the case of a department store, even working in a storeroom can give them a pretty good idea of the kinds of jobs involved," he said.

"It exposes them to the world of work and allows students to see that the skills we teach them in schools can be put to use in the community," said Longmore, adding that a trend towards this type of practical experience is likely to take place in future.

"By involving the community we can make businesses aware of the subjects we teach, and if, for example, our course was behind in any area, the businesses could make suggestions on how to update it."

The occupational program, commerce program, home economics and industrial education areas also feed students into the working world for experience.

Longmore said the school board is beginning to think the need for a work experience co-ordinator who would be the main contact for the business world, would prevent overlapping.

The Empress Hotel, for instance, he said, provides work experience for the all the different programs and more co-ordination would facilitate arrangements.

'Lenders' Evade Responsibility To Pensioners

VANCOUVER (CP) — People on steady but low incomes are driven into the hands of unscrupulous money lenders by "cream skimming" by regular banks and trust companies, Frank Maczko, director of the B.C. Legal Aid Society, said this week.

Mr. Maczko told a service club that banks and trust companies should lower their minimum income requirements to provide housing loans for people now disqualified.

"I don't mean welfare people with no income," Mr. Maczko said. "I mean people only a little poorer than the standards that are now in force. I mean people such as widows on pensions, other pensioners and divorcees."

He said banks and trust companies are evading their responsibility to the public by not accepting marginal risks. He said if insurance companies can pool high risk insurance under the assigned risk system, and lawyers donate their time and thus a share of their profits to legal aid cases, then legitimate mortgage lenders could do the same.

"Trust companies and banks have a monopoly because the interest rates are basically fixed," Mr. Maczko said. "And if you are going to start fixing the rates, then you have a group out there who can't bargain on a fair basis."

He said he has evidence of cases in which people have been legally drawn into mortgages that pay lenders effective interest rates of more than 100 per cent.

"We have no laws against usury in this country, but we should have," he said later. "It is obvious that our courts are not going to get into that area, and that it will require further legislation."

Mr. Maczko said he has made some recommendations to the provincial government.

He said government limits on the interest rates would not be an effective method of control because it would not make borrowing any easier for those on low incomes.

"It would only drive the unscrupulous lenders underground and put things on a much less acceptable basis where we would find people having their legs broken for falling behind on their payments."

Dilemma Of Children's Ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television advertising directed at children was described variously at a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) hearing this week as having "deleterious effects on children's minds" and as interesting and highly engaging.

Citizens' groups endorsed a petition before the commission which would ban commercials on children's TV programs and require a minimum of 14 hours of such proams weekly.

Rosemary Galli, speaking for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, said the ads have a deleterious effect, adding: "Given a free rein, advertisers know no bounds. They must be checked by the FCC.

"It is shocking to know that by the age of 15, a child has witnessed at least 18,000 murders on television—many of them on children's programs."

Aaron Locker, representing the Toy Manufacturers of America Inc., testified that elimination of commercials on children's programs would dramatically reduce the number of programs, if not eliminate them, by drying up funds.

He said children often learn from commercials; some "they dislike, and others they hate, but many they find interesting and highly engaging."

Executives Over 40 Studied

TORONTO (CP) — What can be done about the middle-aged executive whose potential is untapped and whose job is threatened with obsolescence in a rapidly changing business world?

—That, in essence, is the answer being sought in the first phase of a research study announced this wek by Forty Plus of Canada Inc., a non-profit organization established in 1971 to provide counselling and guidance for its over-40 members often at the crossroads in their careers.

Three Canadian companies have contributed a total of $45,000 to launch the program to study factors that influence the ability of executives over 40 to develop and adapt to change.

Jean Lawrence—Toombs, executive director of Forty Plus, told a news conference:

"We want to find out how people can make the most of their years between age 45 and 70, when their mortgage is paid up, their kids have grown up and they still have a lot of drive."

She said the research study will extend over five years and will eventually cost an estimated $245,000. Forty Plus hopes to raise $100,000 through a foundation or government grants and the other $145,000 through gifts and pledges from business organizations.

Robert Morrison of the University of Toronto's faculty of management studies will head the research. He said there is virtually no existing body of confirmed knowledge on the complex subject of mid-career change in North America.

"This is why we feel the research we are undertaking is so tremendously significant. It's a situation that adversely affects not only the lives and livelihoods of thousands of talented Canadians and their individual employers, but the health of the total business community and ultimately the economic and social well-being of the country."

He said that all too often upper management has fired the mid-career executive who only needs help in discovering again his ability to learn and change.

Other phases of the research study will seek to identify environmental influences on an individual's tendency to change and how a company encourages or inhibits executive development.

Effects on family members also will be studied. And the problem will be broadened to investigate how co-operation can be developed to minimize the chance that job obsolescence will occur.

New methods are needed on how to manage people to the best advantage of the employee and employer, Mr. Morrison said. Long-range planning in finances, new products and facilities will have to include planning in executive development.

The three companies involved in the program are Shell Canada Ltd., Excelsior Life Insurance Co. and General Foods Ltd. They each donate $15,000 to finance the research.

PANTS IN HOUSE

OTTAWA (CP) — Flora MacDonald, in Parliament for only a week, apparently achieved a first this week.

MACDONALD
. . . a first

According to Judy La Marsh, a bit of an authority on female MPs, Miss MacDonald became the first to wear a pantssuit in the Commons.

"Goodness, isn't there something else I can be famous for other than for wearing a pantssuit," said the Conservative MP for Kingston and the Islands when asked for permission to take a picture.

Miss La Marsh, a former Liberal cabinet minister and now an open-line radio host in Vancouver, told reporters she and Miss MacDonald had discussed whether the latter should wear such a suit in the morning.

She said Miss MacDonald decided to go ahead.

Dinner Table Success: Think About It First

I recently read that the secret of success at a dinner table was to treat your family like company and your company like family.

Not only does this sound vaguely like something you might find in a Chinese fortune cookie, but I'm not at all convinced that guests want to be treated like family.

Imagine, if you will, Mr. Freebish, the executive vice-president of Freebish Industries, arriving at our house for dinner. As we move into the dining room:

ME: "Did you go to the bathroom, Mr. Freebish? I don't want you jumping up in the middle of the meal."

MR. FREEBISH: "Yes." (His ears redden charmingly.)

MY HUSBAND: "Have some carrots, Mr. Freebish."

MR. F.: "No thank you."

MY HUSBAND: "I said 'have some carrots.' In this house you try some of everything."

MR. F: "Oh, I'm sorry. I seem to have dropped my fork on the rug."

ME: "You may be excused to pick it up. Wipe the dog hair off your napkin. You haven't tried your carrots yet, Mr. Freebish. If you don't eat your carrots, don't expect any dessert. And make sure to eat the lettuce cup under your salad. It's not just there for looks, you know."

MR. F: "May I have the rolls, please?"

MY HUSBAND: "You've already had two. And don't talk with your mouth full."

ME: "Just look at that tablecloth. That was a clean tablecloth, Mr. Freebish. Do you have any idea how hard it is to get shrimp curry out of pink damask? If you hadn't been waving your fork around like a baton, I might have gotten two days out of it."

MR. F: "Did I tell you folks about the new . . ."

MY HUSBAND: "That's enough talking. Eat your supper before it gets cold. And get your elbows off the table."

MR. F: "That roast is delicious. Could I please have one more slice?"

ME: "I'd rather you didn't. I have just enough left for hash. Why don't I fix you a peanut butter and jelly sandwich instead?"

MY HUSBAND: "What's for dessert?"

A Matter for Both of You to Decide

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for nearly a year to a nice guy who has lots to offer, but I want out. Buddy and I were married because we thought I was pregnant. It turned out I wasn't.

At first I was happy. Then I started to miss going out with other guys and having fun. Before I got married I had lots of boy friends and now I miss all that.

Buddy hasn't mistreated me, and I really do like him, but I don't love him, and I can't see staying married to someone I don't love for the rest of my life.

I talked to my pastor and he told me to "grow up," which was no help at all. What I really want is a divorce, but on what grounds? And how should I break the news to Buddy? I hate to just walk out. — Wants Out

DEAR WANTS: If Buddy doesn't know what's on your mind, level with him — and right now! No "nice guy with lots to offer" would want to stay married to a girl who doesn't love him and wants out. This is a matter for both of you to decide. he may be as glad to get rid of you as you are to get rid of him.

DEAR ABBY: Because you appear to be an intelligent women who has managed to combine a successful marriage and family with a career, I am hoping you can offer me some encouragement.

I am a 24-year-old, reasonably intelligent woman. My husband is a young professional man who is presently establishing himself in business. We have a beautiful baby, 6 months old.

I have two years of college credits and want to return to get my degree. When the baby is a year old I plan to take a light course to begin with, and will be away from home only three mornings a week. My husband is 100 per cent for it, but my parents think I am crazy.

My mother tells me if I go back to college it will be the ruination of my marriage. My father feels a woman should be allowed to go to college only in order to find a rich husband, after which she should stay home and have a baby ever year.

I don't feel that I am in any way jeopardizing my marriage. In fact, I think I'm "protecting" it. After all, how many husbands who are getting ahead in the world want to come home to wives who can't talk about anything except toilet training and the price of ground chuck?

I know I'm doing the right thing. All I need is some encouragement from you. — Back To College

DEAR BACK: You have it. Your parents may mean well, but they're off the beam.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Some Facts on Mental Retardation

One of the saddest and most distressing things that can come to a mother and father is the discovery that a child just recently born is retarded mentally.

People who must face this difficulty would be interested in an article in Time magazine last May 8, 1972, on the subject. The author quotes a mother who said, "Tracey came into the world not fully completed; she is literally missing part of her brain." She was the victim of what geneticists call a chromosomal abnormality.

Chromosomes are the 46 microscopic rods that are in every active body cell and which carry on them the many thousands of tiny units called genes, which determine in minute detail what characteristics the infant will have when it is born. Poor Tracey suffered from what doctors call profound mental retardation; at 21 months she could neither walk nor feed herself nor say the few words that most children her age have begun to utter.

Some types of retardation result from the inability of the child's body to handle glucose; perhaps the best known of these peculiar chemical inadequacies is phenylketonuria (or PKU for short), and already there are known defects of this type. The time is coming when all infants will be tested when they are born to see if they have one of these abnormalities, which can sometimes be cured if caught and treated in time.

Other forms of retardation result from some injury to the fetus in the mother's womb, perhaps by an infectious disease like German measles, which can cause a number of physical deformities as well as mental retardation. Defects can also result from the mother's having taken harmful drugs during the early weeks of the pregnancy.

A wonderful new advance in medicine is the use of the technique of amniocentesis to find out if the fetus has any of a certain number of deformities. The amnion is the sac of fluid around the fetus in the mother's womb. Centesis means that a long hypodermic type of needle is passed through the woman's abdominal wall, and through this needle some fluid is removed and studied microscopically and chemically, revealing many things about the fetus, including the infant's sex. It will be important to know the sex of the fetus, in case there is a danger that there may be some hereditary disease that more commonly attacks infants of one sex.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to specu-

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Pilots Again Complain

MONTREAL (CP) — International airline pilots warned Wednesday they will act on their own in "collective self-defence" if governments fail to take effective anti-hijack measures.

"The buck must stop here," Capt. Ola Forsberg, president of the International Federation of Airline Pilots Association (IFALPA) told a meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

The ICAO legal committee is attempting to find ways of enforcing previous international agreements against air piracy and other violent acts disrupting civil aviation.

Mr. Forsberg said failure to find effective curbs could lead to a strike of indefinite length by IFALPA pilots or a more limited boycott action against countries sheltering hijackers.

Knut Hammerskjold, president of the International Air Transport Association, urged that compliance with three prior ICAO pacts be made a condition of continuing membership in ICAO.

ICAO is the major world body regulating safety of world air transport.

N.Y. Medical Gyp Found

NEW YORK (CP) — In a city where welfare is the biggest going business, even dwarfing some giant corporations, fastbuck artists from all walks of life have a ready-made market to exploit. The latest scandal to break is the medical gyp.

It cost the state-run Medicaid program, which provides medical care for some 1.4 million New Yorkers, most of them on welfare, an extra $4 million in fees for examinations in 1971 and 1972.

Authorities disclosed Wednesday that the city's Medicaid program had been bilked of millions of dollars through a widespread doctor-laboratory arrangement under which needless tests, including a pregnancy test for a man, were ordered in return for fat kickbacks.

While considered unethical, the system of "bonuses" paid by laboratories to doctors is not illegal. Legislation was introduced Wednesday to make such payments a criminal offence.

Dr. Howard Katz, senior medical auditor, said a survey of 35 laboratories showed that 30 of them had "bonus" arrangements with doctors or medical groups.

METHODS VARY

Typically, he said, a laboratory makes regular cash payments to a doctor or medical group, pays the salary of a technician on the doctor's staff or rents space in the doctor's office.

In one case, Dr. Katz said, a laboratory paid a doctor $3,000 a month for rental of a closet in the doctor's office.

Included were Sickle cell anemia tests for white persons although the disease is found mainly among blacks.

A review of health department records showed that the percentage of laboratory tests was "considerably" higher in instances where doctors received kickbacks, Dr. Katz said.

The health department suspended four doctors and six laboratories from doing business with Medicaid for up to six months and recovered $350,000 for unnecessary tests including $75,000 from one laboratory.

RESULTS IGNORED

The health department said it was the practice of doctors involved to use the shotgun approach—a battery of tests for patients, then to virtually ignore the results except for the particular test in which they had an interest.

One out of eight persons in the five-borough New York City area is receiving some form of public assistance. The government—on the federal, state and local levels—spends $1 billion a month to care for New Yorkers on welfare.

In addition, the cost of their medical care runs to roughly $1.3 billion a year and is rising rapidly.

Simultaneously with the Medicaid scandal, another was shaping up in the city's police department, which has been described by an investigative commission as rotten almost to the core.

He transferred 97 of 110 policemen to other districts.

DOWDING CHECKS INDIA PARLIAMENT

B.C. legislative Speaker Gordon Dowding is on his way back from a visit to New Delhi where he has been studying procedures of the Indian Parliament, his secretary confirmed today.

Dowding is accompanied by legislative counsel Ian Horne.

Two legislative sub-committees appointed by the Speaker have been visiting various legislatures in search of ways to improve procedures in the British Columbia house.

Dowding has been attending some of these sessions and also travelling on his own. He is expected to report to the legislature on his findings sometime during the next session, which begins Jan. 25.

Indians Fear Hunter Inroads

MONTREAL (CP) — Cree Indians in the James Bay area fear that easier access to their hunting regions will allow sports hunters to wipe out their game supply, an anthropologist told a Quebec Superior Court injunction hearing Wednesday.

During the two-month hunting season last fall, he said, white hunters in the Waswanapi area, 30 miles northwest of Montreal, shot 33 moose, one third the number killed by the Indians all last year.

Harvey Feit, a 34-year-old anthropology professor at Carleton University in Ottawa, said the influx of hunters was severely limited by lack of roads and the cost of accommodation.

"A road giving easier access to the region would be a very dangerous thing," Mr. Feit told Mr. Justice Albert Malouf.

The Indians and Eskimos of the James Bay-Ungava peninsula region are asking for a temporary halt to construction of the $6-billion hydro complex being built by the James Bay Development Corp.

Japan Budget Up 25 Per Cent

TOKYO (WP) — The Tanaka cabinet has given preliminary approval to a highly expansionary government budget which seems certain to add new fuel to an already-booming Japanese economy.

Some businessmen, consumer group leaders and economic commentators expressed fear that the sharply rising outlays — nearly 25 per cent more than the original 1972 government budget unveiled this time last year — may boost consumer price levels far beyond the 5.5 per cent hike officially prescribed in the government's forecast.

From the international point of view, a bit of domestic inflation here may help to ease the problem of a relatively overvalued yen without the official revaluation which Tokyo is so loathe to consider.

Moreover, a highly vigorous domestic economy here should provide a favorable climate for increased imports, thus potentially reducing Japan's big trade surplus with the United States and other countries.

There is no doubt that international considerations were among the major factors behind the government's decision to increase budgetary outlays sharply. Another major consideration appeared to be recent political promises by Premier Kakuei Tanaka and his ruling Liberal Democratic Party to increase spending on public welfare programs.

As drafted by the finance ministry and approved at a special cabinet meeting the fiscal 1973 budget calls for expenditure of $47 billion in the general account budget plus a public investment program of $22 billion. Both the general account and investment figures are more than 24 per cent higher than the corresponding totals of a year ago. A major supplemental budget in November, however, had already made last January's budgetary levels obsolete.

Pensions under government-sponsored annuity systems, now $66 monthly per couple, are scheduled to go up to $166 but required payments into the system will also rise.

Province Founds Park in Okanagan

Recreation and Conservation Mininter Bob Williams Wednesday announced the establishment of a new provincial park at Mabel Lake, 30 miles northwest of Vernon.

The 450-acre park has been named Mabel Lake Provincial Park. It has 6,500 feet of lake frontage.

Price Controls Work: Report

LONDON (CP) — Britain's statutory prices and incomes controls, disliked by labor unions and an aggravation to industrial leaders, have achieved notable success in checking inflation in some areas, says the first official progress report.

The partial freeze has had a dramatic effect in slowing down the rate of price increases in industry generally. But the wholesale price index for December indicates the cost of imported food—a key area where the standstill does not apply — has increased sharply.

The controls were introduced Nov. 6 for a two-month period but are likely to be extended for a further 60 days until some form of voluntary restraint program can be devised.

Wholesale prices generally, after increasing at an annual rate of nine per cent throughout most of 1972, dropped to a three-per-cent rate in December. Most of the three-per-cent increase was due to higher food costs.

The controls on food prices generally are fairly complex and are the centre of a heated dispute between the unions and government on which the anti-inflation policy may yet founder.

Imported foods not processed in Britain but sold directly to the consumer are exempt from the standstill. Home-grown foods, such as meat, vegetables and fruit, which are not subject to a manufacturing process, are also exempt.

But any foods subject to manufacturing in Britain come under the controls.

However, if a manufacturer can show that the costs of raw materials are increasing he can apply to the government to increase his prices as long as the increase proposed would not enlarge his cash margin.

The government now is faced with a long string of such applications, many of which seem bound to be granted over the next month with possibly adverse effects on the control policy.

Flowering Shrubs Also Part of Winter Scene

Winter flowering shrubs are part of the local garden scene in normal winters, but it must be admitted that the location of the garden has a profound influence on the time of blooming and the quantity of flowers.

However, the beauty and fragrance of early flowering shrubs and trees may be yours now by taking advantage of recent frosty weather. You can have flowers opening indoors on twigs and branches, and make lovely spirit-lifting arrangements to suit your own ideas.

The frost and snow have not spoiled any of these hardy shrubs. You will find budded trailing stems of yellow Jasminum nudiflorum ready for cutting. A plain green vase filled with these against dark polished wood will delight you. They are supposed to have perfume but I have never detected it.

If you grow the Algerian-iris, Iris unguicularis, this lack is easily remedied, for the seemingly fragile blooms are as free with their scent as the jasmine is stingy. Look for an unopened bud or two low down among the yellowed leaves of last year. Cut them and bring into the house to open in a day or so with the yellow jasmine. You will then have everything, fragrance, color and form.

Woody plants, such as the flowering plum and cherry (of the Prunus group) and forsythias, should be scanned for branches and twigs which bear flower buds.

They are rounder than leaf buds and on darker wood. Cut some pieces, bring indoors and cover with warm (not hot) water for up to four hours. Shake off surplus moisture, crush the bottom inch or more of each stem, then set into warm water in suitably deep vases.

The warmth of the house after the frosty weather, persuades the buds that spring has arrived. The buds open and you have the deep pink of plum with the gold of forsythia to arrange.

Viburnum bodnantense and V. fragrans are two shrubs normally free with flowers outdoors now, but unopened buds on short twiggy pieces cut will open indoors. Both are vanilly scented.

Purple and white Daphne mezereum are richly scented yet many gardeners miss them entirely by not going into the garden in winter. Bring pieces indoors where they last for a week.

Azara microphyllum may be a frost casualty in your garden. Only in specially favored gardens either near salt water, or with protection of frost-filtering evergreens, will this intriguing little evergreen survive. The tiny box-like leaves and scented, petal-less flowers on the back of each twig open in any spell of mild sunny weather, or indoors. You can't miss it, for its scent is really free on the air.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer was confronted, at trick two, with a problem that could not be deferred: should he draw trumps, or should he go after some other suit. As will be observed, on his decision rested the outcome of his game contract.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

As South won the opening spade lead with dummy's ace, he appreciated that he was in dummy for the first and last time. The issue was how to leave the dummy? By leading a trump and finessing against East's hoped-for queen, or, instead, by leading a club and hoping that East had been dealt the ace?

It was, of course, a 50-50 proposition as to whether East had been dealt the heart queen; and it was equally a 50-50 proposition as to whether East had been dealt the the club ace. Nevertheless, the correct play was to lead a club at trick two, and not a trump.

If East has the club ace, South's king becomes a winner, and his game-going trick, since all he will lose will be a heart, a diamond, and a club. But if East has the trump queen, and declarer takes the trump finesse at trick two, he might still lose a trump trick to East's queen. Such would be the case if East were dealt the Q-x-x-x of hearts. And, in the latter set-up, declarer would go down, losing a heart, a diamond and two clubs.

Even if West had possessed the club ace (in theory), declarer's club lead off dummy, although now resulting in the loss of two club tricks, would not necessarily have doomed him to defeat. Upon regaining the lead, he would have cashed the ace and king of trumps. Whenever either defender had been dealt either the doubleton queen, or the singleton queen, declarer would avoid the loss of a trump trick; and his only losers would have been two clubs and a diamond.

PARENTAL ADVICE

CAMBRIDGE, England (CP) — When the cat's away, the mice will play, or so the saying goes. Parents in this Cambridgeshire town were told to stay home whenever possible if they have teen-age children. Speaking at a meeting, Prof. Ivor Mills said youngsters usually make love for the first time at home when their parents spend an evening out together. "It is worthwhile parents sacrificing their leisure for their children's sakes," Mills, a professor of medicine, said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who began cashing bad cheques within a week of his release from jail for similar offences was sent back to prison for a year Wednesday.

William Edward Holland, 41, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty in provincial court to multiple counts of false pretences as well as to driving without insurance and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

The bad cheques, totalling close to $200, were cashed at city stores, a motel, a hairdresser's and a pharmacy between last October and this month.

Besides concurrent one-year sentences for the false-pretences charges, he was barred from driving anywhere in Canada for two years.

Two young men checked by police Tuesday night both received suspended sentences when they pleaded guilty to being in possession of marijuana in one case and hashish residue in the other.

Kevin Gentile, 21, of 3411 Doncaster, was found to have a small quantity of marijuana in a plastic bag in a jacket pocket. He told Judge William Ostler he was attending Camosun College with the help of a government grant.

Lynwood Jacob, 21, of the same address, was found to have a stone pipe with hashish residue in it.

Gentile was placed on probation for a year and Jacob for six months.

Mrs. Libby Sokol, 68, of 1631 Warren Gardens was fined $250 when she pleaded guilty to theft of goods valued under $200.

Court was told that the accused, in the company of two men said to be her husband and son, tried to leave Woodward's Tuesday after taking a file handle, a bottle of pills and a steak which she hid in her purse.

Value of the goods she tried to steal was $5.38. She had more than $400 in her purse at the time of the attempted theft.

New Curbs on Foreign Capital

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government is preparing new legislation to screen foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses, Industry Minister Alstair Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday.

The new policy on foreign ownership will be tougher than that contained in a bill proposed by the government in the last Parliament, he said.

The legislation will propose a new type of screening agency under a senior official who will report directly to the minister.

The earlier bill, which died at dissolution, would have required investors to file plans with a registrar in the industry department.

Gillespie said the new bill would be followed by regulations of new foreign investment in co-operation with the provinces and by imposing a licence restriction on transfers of technology into Canada.

He told the House the government would not be rushed into dealing with the foreign ownership issue because of the importance of the issue and later he said it could be several years after establishment of the screening agency before the government starts regulating new investment from outside Canada.

The government indicated in the throne speech last week that a further measure will require the majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies to be Canadians.

Also in the Commons Wednesday, Wally Frith (NDP—Northwest Territories) demanded immediate settlement of aboriginal land claims.

Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who touched on the subject briefly during question period, later said the aboriginal rights controversy poses a difficult matter to decide.

In dealing with it, the government will respect "the rights of the Crown" as they apply to natives but will also take into account native treaty claims.

Frith issued a press release Wednesday saying he will ask the House on Friday to set up a special committee to investigate the matter.

Making his first speech of the session Wednesday,

Nixon Ends Most Curbs On Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon abolished mandatory wage-price controls today, except for the food and health industries, and established a self-administering system keyed to government economic standards.

The surprise move—far more sweeping than had been expected—came as Nixon asked Congress for a one-year extension of his authority to control wages and prices.

The president abolished the pay board and the price commission but retained the cost of living council to manage his Phase 3 economic system.

The new program, which immediately replaces the Phase 2 system established in November 1971, "is self-administering and based on voluntary compliance," the White House said.

No longer will large businesses and labor unions have to get prior government approval for wage or price increases except in "special problem areas" which Nixon listed as food processing and retailing, and the health industry.

The president also continued the present system of looser mandatory controls over construction wage increases and said the present voluntary effort to keep interest rates down will stay in effect.

But for those industries and unions freed today from mandatory controls, the government retains the right to move in with stiff action to "force back unreasonable increases."

Nixon said in a message to Congress that his goal is to reduce the inflation rate to 2.5 per cent or less by the end of 1973. He said his 90-day Phase 1 wage-price freeze and his Phase 2 mandatory controls have cut the inflation rate by nearly half to about 3.5 per cent.

Nixon's new program abolishes rent controls and is intended to "allow reasonable flexibility" in wage and price increases, Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz told reporters.

Under Phase 3, a new labor-management advisory committee with members including top industrialists and such labor leaders as the AFL-CIO's George Meany will decide whether the current 5.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases should be modified.

That standard remains in effect until the panel meets and the cost of living council decides whether to accept its recommendation.

As a general guide for Phase 3, the White House said price increases should not exceed increases in costs. "Even where costs have increased," a White House summary said, "prices should not be increased if the firm's profit margin exceeds the firm's base-period profit margin."

"Alternatively," the summary added, "a firm may increase prices to reflect increased cost without regard to its profit margin if the firm's average price increases would not exceed 1.5 per cent in a year."

BILL TO EXTEND HANGING BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment for another five years was given first reading today in the Commons.

The bill, the first piece of legislation put before the new Parliament, may come up for debate Friday.

The present bill calls for the same exemptions. It also would do away with the terms capital and non-capital murder.

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — Women with moustaches?

In publicizing the contest, organizers invited "everyone" on the base to enter.

When registrations opened Wednesday, 12 wives of servicemen arrived to sign up for the contest.

Their point, one said, was to show that the designation "everyone" was not limited "to the male of the species."

Paris Talks Expand

PARIS (Reuter) — The Vietnam peace talks between United States presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese Politburo member L Duc Tho took on a new dimension today when they were joined by their technical experts working on a ceasefire arrangement.

It was the first time the experts had been present since Kissinger and Tho resumed their discussions last Monday.

Sullivan and Thach and their experts have held almost 50 hours of technical discussions since Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, United States planes kept up heavy raids on the North Vietnamese panhandle today while ground action tapered off in South Vietnam.

Logging Fish Kill Protested

They claimed neither the provincial nor federal government have done anything to stop logging companies from filling streams with debris.

The group, called the Save Our Salmon Committee, brought in several trucks loaded with some of the debris collected from the up-Island streams, along with specimens of dead fish purported to have died in the struggle to make it upstream.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, acting in the absence of Resources Minister Bob Williams, came out of the buildings to speak to the demonstrators and arranged a meeting with resources and conservation officials.

The most graphic illustration of the mood of the fishermen was a cartoon painted on the side of a truck.

Also attending the meeting are Alberni MLA Robert Skelly and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst.

Hall said he agreed with the fishermen that the problem is "a very serious one." He pointed out that Williams is out of town on vacation, but said Williams was aware of the situation and was taking action on it.

Spokesman for the SOS committee, president Gerald Clarke, said Skelly had told the fishermen that a stop-cutting order had been obtained to keep the logging companies

Posties Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings between postal union and government negotiators resumed here today after a union vote that rejected proposals of the workers' national bargaining committee.

The postal workers rejected by 11,217 to 9,479 a negotiating committee recommendation to turn down contract proposals of a conciliation board report.

But the result of the vote, announced Wednsday was causing interpretation problems.

Some union leaders saw it as an expression of non-confidence in the bargaining committee, while others saw it as a motion of support for basic principles outlined in the conciliation report.

Bill Kidd, education director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the national leaders did not see the vote against the committee recommendation as an expression of non-confidence.

Most Pilots Said Against Bombing of the North

Times News Services

SAIGON — A B-52 commander who balked at bombing North Vietnam after his 175th mission said today "most pilots do not want to bomb targets in North Vietnam."

But there are some who do, says Capt. Michael Heck.

"One of the pilots made the statement he wanted to hit civilian targets because it made him feel good," says Heck, 30, of Chula Vista, Clif.

Heck said: That's the quote of the pilot but this is not typical of all the pilots. Most don't like what they are doing but they follow orders."

He said: "There is enough suffering just in South Vietnam to warrant a discontinuation of the war. But the massive bombing of the North might have been the last straw and I think the step that specifically pushed me over the brink.

"After the ceasefire for Christmas, the massive bombardments resumed and I decided I had to take the step. I reached the decision Dec. 26 and I went to see my wing commander and informed him of my decision. He advised me to seek legal assistance."

Heck, a 1964 alumnus of President Nixon's Quaker alma mater, Whittier College, could get two years in a military prison if a court martial convicts him of failure to obey a general order.

"I can live with that easier than I can with taking part in the war," he said.

A spokesman for the Strategic Air Coommand in Omaha, Neb., said Heck is "the first and only" B-52 crew member to face a charge of "alleged failure to obey an order to fly a combat mission in Southeast Asia."

Heck's decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 10 Oak Leaf clusters and two Presidential Unit Citations.

Another Air Force captain who participated in the B-52 bombing missions has charged the Strategic Air Command with "stupidity and laxity' in planning the raids.

"Either by stupidity or sheer laziness, my crew bombed the same target on the first and third nights of the raids," using the same routes covered by enemy missiles, he said in a letter to Senator Charles Matthias Jr. (R-Md.), his home-state senator.

HECK

Matthias forwarded the letter to Senator John C. Stennis, (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate armed services committee, saying it describes "a disturbing situation in which unnecessary risks were taken." Matthias asked for further investigation.

Matthias' office deleted the names of the captain, who was the plane's navigator, and a sergeant who also signed it.

U.S. Eyes More Canadian Fuel

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the U.S. Federal Power Commission predicted today steadily increasing oil and natural gas imports from Canada; but said the "primary efforts" of the U.S. should be aimed at expanding domestic production.

John Nassikas, an influential policy adviser, told the Senate interior committee on oil and gas imports that more domestic production could involve more intrusions on federal lands, changes in tax and pricing policies and "reappraisal" of federal environmental standards.

While Nassikas was making his forecast, many parts of the United States were still feeling the pinch of a shortage of fuel oil and heating gas.

Schools were closed in many areas, industrial employees were laid off, airline and bus services faced a threat of curtailment, and thermostats were lowered at some military bases.

On Wednesday a senior Nixon administration official told the Senate hearing that Canada and the U.S. have reached a "fair degree of understanding" on one of their major oil-import problems.

However, the official, Gen. George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, gave no indication that a final agreement is near.

Lincoln said that a "series of meetings" was held between November, 1971, and December, 1972, to discuss President Nixon's proposals to lift import quotas on Canadian crude oil.

Nixon said the quotas now largely superseded because of the insatiable demand by U.S. refiners would be lifted if agreement could be reached on supplies for eastern Canada in the event of an emergency.

Canada has generally taken the position that the two issues are not related and should not be linked.

Replying to questions from committee chairman Henry Jackson, Democratic senator from Washington, Lincoln said there had been "forthright and friendly discussions with Canada . . . and a fair degree of understanding."

But he did not amplify that statement and Canadian sources here said they could make no comment on the talks.

The hearings were held in an atmosphere of extraordinary interest, with 15 senators turning out under bright television lights and before a jam-packed public audience.

testimony that the growing U.S. energy shortage has finally become a "glamor" issue in American politics.

Nassikas told the committee today gas from Canada's Arctic islands "will be especially expensive and difficult to transport to the mainland."

Other factors likely to inhibit gas imports from Canada, Nassikas said, include Canadian policy protecting domestic needs, the rate of discovery of reserves and capital requirements for pipelines.

Nassikas, 55, a former utility lawyer who has been chairman of the powerful FPC for four years, and other members of that regulatory agency faced close questioning by committee members about natural-gas prices and the effect of freeing such prices from EPC controls.

In Calgary, R. P. Hooper, a senior adviser to Resources Canada, said the rising demands of the United States and that country's desire for secure supplies will make development of the Athabasca oil sands more viable.

The higher demand would lead to spectacular increases in the prices of Canadian oil and increased United States interest in Canada's frontier areas.

$75M Land Bank Aid Sought

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer will fly to Ottawa Jan. 20 to press his request that the federal government provide $75 million for a provincial land bank.

The bank, started in early December, is a plan to buy property to provide low-cost housing and at the same time combat escalating prices of ordinary housing.

"If we can pick up enough land we can control the developers," said Lorimer.

"We will certainly have an influence on prices."

The federal government provided an initial $5 million in December to launch the land acquisition program in Greater Vancouver and Greater Victoria.

So far only one piece of land in Victoria, 4.3 acres of municipal property on McCaskill St. in Victoria West, has been bought for the land bank.

LORIMER

"We're looking at other sites in the Greater Victoria area," said Lorimer, but no purchases have been completed.

When further federal grants or loans have been settled, property in other parts of British Columbia will be added to the land bank, he said.

Only a fraction of each piece of land being bought — perhaps 15 or 20 per cent — will be used for subsidized low-income housing, he said. The rest will be leased to ordinary families at reasonable prices that will give stiff competition to private land developers.

The result, said Lorimer, will be to have subsidized housing mixed completely in with ordinary housing, not set out in big complexes like Blanshard Court.

"No one in Greater Victoria will know where it (the low income housing) is," Lorimer said, because it will be integrated.

Schools Gear for Strike Hoping It Won't Happen

ONE-CENT INCREASE in gas prices requires adjustment to pumps at Victoria gas stations including Causeway Esso Service, Government and Wharf, where Mark Hinson dials in the new prices — 53.9 cents per gallon for regular, 58.9 premium. Other gas firms are following Imperial Oil's lead in raising prices one cent per gallon. (Irving Strickland photos.)

Contingency plans have been made by the Greater Victoria School District for a possible strike by 269 blue-collar employees.

But district superintendent A. J. Longmore said today the administration is hoping that differences with Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will be worked out at a meeting Sunday called by mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

Some principals have been advising students to listen to radio stations Monday morning for instructions in the event a strike has begun.

The union, which is seeking a new contract to replace the one which expired Dec. 31, is free to strike but is not expected to until the results of Sunday's meeting are known.

"We are quite hopeful we can come up with a settlement," said Longmore.

What the administration has said to principals is that, if differences are not solved, "and if we find on Monday morning or any morning that the union has decided to follow its legal prerogatives, we will advise parents and students between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. on radio on what should be done."

Longmore said the administration "has been planning, should the eventuality take place." He said the administration would be "remiss if we waited to Monday and then said: What shall we do now:" But he again said the district wants to reach a settlement.

He declined to spell out specifics in contingency plans because it would "not be good for management and employee relations."

School district officials made it clear earlier that they will try to keep schools open in the event of a strike. One of the keys is the heating system at each school. Newer furnaces with automatic controls require little supervision, but older furnaces need manual operation.

When this point was made by a teacher to one group of students this week, a student called out "let's hear it for old-fashioned furnaces."

NEW LICENCE PLATES for Greater Victoria cars will keep Mary Lou Bell and other Motor Vehicles Branch employees busy from now until Feb. 28 — the deadline for new plates. Barrett Seeks Gas Price Talks

Premier Barrett said today he has asked for a meeting Jan. 23 with representatives of Imperial Oil Limited.

Although Barrett would not say so, it is expected he will discuss recent announcements by Imperial and other major oil companies in Canada that prices of their fuel are about to go up.

The premier was asked before entering a cabinet meeting if the government intends to proclaim legislation passed by the former Social Credit administration which would give the provincial government the power to control prices of fuel in B.C.

He would only repeat that he has a meeting arranged with Imperial. But he added that the meeting was arranged at his request.

Asked about the price increases announced by the oil companies, Mines and Petroleum Minister Leo Nimsick said gasoline should be treated as a utility.

"To me gasoline is a utility and should come under the same situation as other utilities. It should be governed by the Public Utilities Act," Nimsick said.

He agreed that this system would involve price increases only after public hearings were held.

Asked if the provincial government has the competence to treat gasoline as another utility, Nimsick said: "Certainly, we can get the competence to do anything."

Liquor 'Advisers' To Replace Board

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said today he expects the government to do away with the one-man Liquor Control Board and replace it with an advisory board that will consult the public on important decisions.

The attorney-general said he could not make an announcement but agreed that the one-man board system was inadequate.

An advisory board would hold public hearings and make recommendation on such innovations as neighborhood pubs, Macdonald said.

Macdonald's statement was expected in view of past complaints by the New Democratic Party, when in opposition, about the autocratic way in which the LCB operates.

The "board" in fact consists of only one man, William Bruce, who has held the job of chairman since 1969 although he was only confirmed in the post by the Social Credit government in April, 1971.

The Morrow liquor inquiry commission recommended a three-man liquor board be established and that its hearings be held in public.

It deplored the fact that there is no appeal from decisions of the board by individuals or companies who may feel they have been unjustly treated, and called for a process of appeals to the courts.

But nothing was ever done about implementing these and other recommendations of the commission — including the proposal for neighborhood pubs.

GAS 5c CHEAPER ACROSS THE BORDER

Gasoline prices appear to be about 5 cents per gallon cheaper in Bellingham than in Victoria, according to a spot check at service stations in both cities today.

Imperial Esso service stations are increasing their prices to 53.9 for regular gasoline on the heels of a 1 cent per gallon wholesale price increase by Imperial Oil.

In Bellingham, meanwhile, a major Chevron Standard station said Standard Oil stations there were selling gasoline for an average price of 40 cents regular and 44 cents premium.

Gallons in the United States are only four-fifths as large as Canadian gallons.

A gallon of gas in Victoria sells at 53.9 regular minus about 15 cents for taxes for a retail price of 38.9 cents.

The same product in the United States sells for 40 cents, minus 13 cents for taxes, or 27 cents.

If the Bellingham gallon was the same size as the Canadian gallon, the gas would be selling for 34 cents plus taxes while the Victoria gallon sells for 38.9 cents per gallon plus taxes.

The difference is 4.9 cents more per gallon in Victoria.

SCARF BLAMED

A long scarf was blamed for a freak motorcycle accident which slightly injured two persons Wednesday.

Police said Barbara Bravenber, 19, of 3764 South Raymond, was a passenger on a motorcycle driven by David Fleming, of 1246 Montrose, at about 4 p.m. Wednesday when her scarf caught in the rear wheel of the bike. Miss Bravenber and Fleming were thrown from the motorcycle.

City Misses Island Snow Storm

Worst of Winter Police Say

Victoria escaped unscathed Wednesday night while almost all the rest of Vancouver Island slithered on roads made treacherous by heavy snow.

Although a little snow fell in the outer areas of Greater Victoria it had turned to rain by midnight. At Brentwood three inches of snow fell and there was one inch on the ground at Keating Cross Road.

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie observed today:

"This time we came out on top."

Road conditions in Port Alberni were so bad that some policemen were forced to abandon highway patrols. An RCMP spokesman described them as "as bad as they've been all winter."

Downtown Campbell River and much of the surrounding streets were turned into a shambles as snow and abandoned cars caused snarl-ups.

Fog compounded the problem at Duncan, combining with snow to reduce visibility to about 40 feet.

Police, in all these areas, urged motorists to stay at home. Good snow tires and-or chains were mandatory.

Although many car accidents were reported throughout the island no injuries were reported.

Although the front of the bus, driven by Nanoose resident Joseph Ordano, was badly damaged, both he and the passengers escaped unhurt. The men aboard were American technicians and servicemen using the Canadian armed forces' torpedo testing range at Nanoose.

Nanaimo, Ladysmith and Courtenay reported snow falls of between three to six inches. While road conditions were described as varying from fair to poor they didn't deteriorate to the point of being treacherous.

As warmer air moved over Vancouver Island today the snow turned to rain in many areas making roads slushy.

"There is no high tide and the river is low; so as long as the system can take the water there should be no problem, he said.

A provincial highways official described roads in the Cowichan Valley as being in fair winter condition. If people drive defensively they should have no problems, he added.

The traffic-paralysing snowstorms that ended a 10-day cold snap were repeated on the mainland. About an inch of wet snow on the lower mainland triggered a string of highway accidents between Clearbrook and Aldergrove on highway 401.

A freeway patrol spokesman reported both east and westbound lanes blocked for two hours by a series of accidents involving 20 trucks and cars. There were no serious injuries. Damage was estimated at $43,000 in the pile-up, $38,000 of it to a trailer-truck that jack-knifed.

There, too, today warmer temperatures and a steady drizzle were reducing the snow to slush.

Rain over the Greater Victoria area should ease by tonight but heavier rain is forcast for the weekend.

Winds will remain brisk, about 25 miles-an-hour southeasterlies, with small craft warning being posted for both the Strait of Georgia and the Juan de Fuca Strait.

New Rules on Foreign Capital

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government is preparing new legislation to screen foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses, Industry Minister Alstair Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday.

The new policy on foreign ownership will be tougher than that contained in a bill proposed by the government in the last Parliament, he said.

The legislation will propose a new type of screening agency under a senior official who will report directly to the minister.

The earlier bill, which died at dissolution, would have required investors to file plans with a registrar in the industry department.

Gillespie said the new bill would be followed by regulations of new foreign investment in co-operation with the provinces and by imposing a licence restriction on transfers of technology into Canada.

He told the House the government would not be rushed into dealing with the foreign ownership issue because of the importance of the issue and later he said it could be several years after establishment of the screening agency before the government starts regulating new investment from outside Canada.

The government indicated in the throne speech last week that a further measure will require the majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies to be Canadians.

Also in the Commons Wednesday, Wally Frith (NDP—Northwest Territories) demanded immediate settlement of aboriginal land claims.

Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who touched on the subject briefly during question period, later said the aboriginal rights controversy poses a difficult matter to decide.

In dealing with it, the government will respect "the rights of the Crown" as they apply to natives but will also take into account native treaty claims.

Frith issued a press release Wednesday saying he will ask the House on Friday to set up a special committee to investigate the matter.

Making his first speech of the session Wednesday,

Nixon Ends Most Curbs On Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon abolished mandatory wage-price controls today, except for the food and health industries, and established a self-administering system keyed to government economic standards.

The surprise move—far more sweeping than had been expected—came as Nixon asked Congress for a one-year extension of his authority to control wages and prices.

The president abolished the pay board and the price commission but retained the cost of living council to manage his Phase 3 economic system.

The new program, which immediately replaces the Phase 2 system established in November 1971, "is self-administering and based on voluntary compliance," the White House said.

No longer will large businesses and labor unions have to get prior government approval for wage or price increases—except in "special problem areas" which Nixon listed as food processing and retailing, and the health industry.

The president also continued the present system of looser mandatory controls over construction wage increases and said the present voluntary effort to keep interest rates down will stay in effect.

But for those industries and unions freed today from mandatory controls, the government retains the right to move in with stiff action to force back unreasonable increases.

Nixon said in a message to Congress that his goal is to reduce the inflation rate to 2.5 per cent or less by the end of 1973. He said his 90-day Phase 1 wage-price freeze and his Phase 2 mandatory controls had cut the inflation rate by nearly half—to about 3.5 per cent.

Nixon's new program abolishes rent controls and is intended to "allow reasonable flexibility" in wage and price increases, Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz told reporters.

Under Phase 3, a new labor-management advisory committee with members including top industrialists and such labor leaders as the AFL-CIO's George Meany will decide whether the current 5.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases should be modified.

That standard remains in effect until the panel meets and the cost of living council decides whether to accept its recommendation.

As a general guide for Phase 3, the White House said price increases should not exceed increases in costs. "Even where costs have increased," a White House summary said, "prices should not be increased if the firm's profit margin exceeds the firm's base-period profit margin."

"Alternatively," the summary added, "a firm may increase prices to reflect increased cost without regard to its profit margin if the firm's average price increases would not exceed 1.5 per cent in a year."

BILL TO EXTEND HANGING BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment for another five years was given first reading today in the Commons.

The bill, the first piece of legislation put before the new Parliament, may come up for debate Friday.

The present bill calls for the same exemptions. It also would do away with the terms capital and non-capital murder.

BIG PENSION HIKE

OTTAWA (CP) — "A substantial increase of pensions to aged people will be announced soon," Health Minister Marc Lalonde promised in the Commons today.

The announcement appeared to boost the minority Liberal government's chances of maintaining New Democrat support.

Posties Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings between postal union and government negotiators resumed here today after a union vote that rejected proposals of the workers' national bargaining committee.

The postal workers rejected by 11,217 to 9,479 a negotiating committee recommendation to turn down contract proposals of a conciliation board report.

But the result of the vote, announced Wednsday, was causing interpretation problems.

Some union leaders saw it as an expression of non-confidence in the bargaining committee, while others saw it as a motion of support for basic principles outlined in the conciliation report.

Bill Kidd, education director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the national leaders did not see the vote against the committee recommendation as an expression of non-confidence.

Paris Talks Expand

PARIS (Reuter) — The Vietnam peace talks between United States presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese Politburo member L Duc Tho took on a new dimension today when they were joined by their technical experts working on a ceasefire arrangement.

It was the first time the experts had been present since Kissinger and Tho resumed their discussions last Monday.

Sullivan and Thach and their experts have held almost 50 hours of technical discussions since Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, United States planes kept up heavy raids on the North Vietnamese panhandle today while ground action tapered off in South Vietnam.

Logging Fish Kill Protested

They claimed neither the provincial nor federal government have done anything to stop logging companies from filling streams with debris.

About 40 fishermen, some with their families, from Tofino, Ucluelet and other Island points took part in the demonstration.

The group, called the Save Our Salmon Committee, brought in several trucks loaded with some of the debris collected from the up-Island streams, along with specimens of dead fish purported to have died in the struggle to make it upstream.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, acting in the absence of Resources Minister Bob Williams, came out of the buildings to speak to the demonstrators and arranged a meeting with resources and conservation officials.

The most graphic illustration of the mood of the fishermen was a cartoon painted on the side of a truck.

Also attending the meeting are Alberni MLA Robert Skelly and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst.

Hall said he agreed with the fishermen that the problem is "a very serious one." He pointed out that Williams is out of town on vacation, but said Williams was aware of the situation and was taking action on it.

Spokesman for the SOS committee, president Gerald Clarke, said Skelly had told the fishermen that a stop-cutting order had been obtained to keep the logging companies

Most Pilots Said Against Bombing of the North

Times News Services

SAIGON — A B-52 commander who balked at bombing North Vietnam after his 175th mission said today "most pilots do not want to bomb targets in North Vietnam."

But there are some who do, says Capt. Michael Heck.

"One of the pilots made the statement he wanted to hit civilian targets because it made him feel good," says Heck, 30, of Chula Vista, Calif.

Heck said: "That's the quote of the pilot but this is not typical of all the pilots. Most don't like what they are doing but they follow orders."

He said: "There is enough suffering just in South Vietnam to warrant a discontinuation of the war. But the massive bombing of the North might have been the last straw and I think the step that specifically pushed me over the brink.

"After the ceasefire for Christmas, the massive bombardments resumed and I decided I had to take the step. I reached the decision Dec. 26 and I went to see my wing commander and informed him of my decision. He advised me to seek legal assistance."

Heck, a 1964 alumnus of President Nixon's Quaker alma mater, Whittier College, could get two years in a military prison if a court-martial convicts him of failure to obey a general order.

"I can live with that easier than I can with taking part in the war," he said.

A spokesman for the Strategic Air Coommand in Omaha, Neb., said Heck is "the first and only" B-52 crew member to face a charge of "alleged failure to obey an order to fly a combat mission in Southeast Asia."

Heck's decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 10 Oak Leaf clusters and two Presidential Unit Citations.

Another Air Force captain who participated in the B-52 bombing missions has charged the Strategic Air Command with "stupidity and laxity' in planning the raids.

"Either by stupidity or sheer laziness, my crew bombed the same target on the first and third nights of the raids," using the same routes covered by enemy missiles, he said in a letter to Senator Charles Matthias Jr., (R-Md.), his home-state senator.

HECK

Matthias forwarded the letter to Senator John C. Stennis, (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate armed services committee, saying it describes "a disturbing situation in which unnecessary risks were taken." Matthias asked for further investigation.

Matthias' office deleted the names of the captain, who was the plane's navigator, and a sergeant who also signed it.

U.S. Eyes More Canadian Fuel

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the U.S. Federal Power Commission predicted today steadily increasing oil and natural gas imports from Canada, but said the "primary efforts" of the U.S. should be aimed at expanding domestic production.

John Nassikas, an influential policy adviser, told the Senate interior committee on oil and gas imports that more domestic production could involve more intrusions on federal lands, changes in tax and pricing policies and "reappraisal" of federal environmental standards.

While Nassikas was making his forecast, many parts of the United States were still feeling the pinch of a shortage of fuel oil and heating gas.

Schools were closed in many areas, industrial employees were laid off, airline and bus services faced a threat of curtailment, and thermostats were lowered at some military bases.

On Wednesday a senior Nixon administration official told the Senate hearing that Canada and the U.S. have reached a "fair degree of understanding" on one of their major oil-import problems.

However, the official, Gen. George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, gave no indication that a final agreement is near.

Lincoln said that a "series of meetings" was held between November, 1971, and December, 1972, to discuss President Nixon's proposals to lift import quotas on Canadian crude oil.

Nixon said the quotas now largely superseded because of the insatiable demand by U.S. refiners would be lifted if agreement could be reached on supplies for Eastern Canada in the event of an emergency.

Canada has generally taken the position that the two issues are not related and should not be linked.

Replying to questions from committee chairman Henry Jackson, Democratic senator from Washington, Lincoln said there had been "forthright and friendly discussions with Canada . . . and a fair degree of understanding."

But he did not amplify that statement and Canadian sources here said they could make no comment on the talks.

The hearings were held in an atmosphere of extraordinary interest, with 15 senators turning out under bright television lights, and before a jam-packed public audience testimony that the growing U.S. energy shortage has finally become a "glamor" issue in American politics.

Nassikas told the committee today gas from Canada's Arctic islands "will be especially expensive and difficult to transport to the mainland."

Other factors likely to inhibit gas imports from Canada, Nassikas said, include Canadian policy protecting domestic needs, the rate of discovery of reserves and capital requirements for pipelines.

Nassikas, 55, a former utility lawyer who has been chairman of the powerful FPC for four years, and other members of that regulatory agency faced close questioning by committee members about natural-gas prices and the effect of freeing such prices from EPC controls.

In Calgary, R. P. Hooper, a senior adviser to Resources Canada said the rising demands of the United States and that country's desire for secure supplies will make development of the Athabasca oil sands more viable.

The higher demand would lead to spectacular increases in the prices of Canadian oil and increased United States interest in Canada's frontier areas.

Copper Price Hike 'Good News'

By Al Forrest
Times Business Editor

British Columbia copper producers were jubilant today at news prices had increased to 53 cents per pound from 50.5 cents.

"This is the best news we have had in a long time. Quite frankly we were just marking time in 1972. This will make a big difference to us."

In Vancouver, one mining company spokesman estimated the price increase would mean an additional $20 million to copper producers in B.C. in 1973 based upon today's price increase alone.

The production was based upon an estimated value of B.C. copper production of $318 million in 1973, an increase of $100 million over 1972.

Rhodesia banned rail transport across the border to halt the smuggling of arms to Rhodesian rebels. The effect is to cut off most of Zambia's coal supply, vital in Zambia's copper milling.

In addition, Kennecott Copper Corp, announced it has seized 3,000 tons of Chilean copper. The seizure was made to satisfy Kennecott claims for compensation for its nationalized mines in Chile.

Because the copper will not be sold immediately, it has been removed from the world's supply. Kennecott is a major United States copper producer.

The increases brought strong market activity among Canadian copper producers including Nornada Mines, Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting, Bethlehem, Cranduc, Gibraltar, Cominco, Lornex and Pine Point.

In Port Hardy, Pratt said the copper price increases constituted the first good news for copper producers in many months.

He said North American copper producers had discovered they were at a competitive disadvantage because no amount of machinery or technical ability can result in high profits out of low-grade open pit copper mines such as are found on this continent.

African and South American mines with high quality copper in underground mines had a strong production advantage that could only be overcome by a more advantageous marketing position.

Nearness to customers in United States and Japan and political stability were two major assets assisting B.C. producers, he said.

He said producers needed high prices to operate profitably and prices had sagged in 1972.

Average copper price in 1972 had been 43.97 cents per pound, down from 46.69 cents per pound in 1971.

Island Copper, owned by Utah Mining and Construction Company of San Francisco, is the major copper producer in B.C. at present although two other mines are expected to surpass its production in 1973.

Copper mines are rated by the amount of ore their mills can process per day. The ore produces about .4 per cent copper concentrate.

The major copper mines, with the 1973 rated capacity, are: Gilbraltar 40,000 tons of ore per day, Lornex 38,000, Island Copper 33,000, Brenda 24,000 (copper and molybdenum), Bethlehem 16,000, Similkameen 15,000, Granilse 14,000 Bell Copper 10,000, Granduc 7,000 and Graigmont 5,000.

B.C. Firms Facing Uncertainties As Britain Introduces Tariffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new tariff system set for next year is causing uncertainties on the future of about a quarter of British Columbia's $165 million in annual exports to the United Kingdom.

The tariffs go into effect in January, 1974, as the result of Britain's entry into the European Common Market.

Principal products affected will be certain paper and paperboard products, lead, zinc, and fish products.

In the long run, however, this trade is expected to pick up again as Britain gains economic muscle as a result of joining the ECM.

The tariffs will hit B.C.'s dwindling trade with the U.K., in 1964, 13.5 per cent of the province's total exports went to the U.K., but now only 5 per cent goes there.

Hardest hit will be the nearly $20 million worth of paper and paper-board product exported annually. Newsprint is exempted.

TARIFF CLIMBING

In 1974, these products will face a 4.8-per-cent tariff which will scale up in steps until it reaches 12 per cent in 1977.

In addition, last summer Finland and Sweden, Canada's main competitor in these products, concluded an agreement allowing them to export the same products to Britain virtually duty-free.

Canada's loss of its present parity of entry to Britain "will be a wall of formidable proportions," Howard Hart, Canadian Pulp and Paper president, says.

Negotiations involving lead, zinc, and fish products also appear to be headed for tariffs, says B.C.'s industrial development department.

B.C. now exports about $10 million worth each of lead and zinc to Britain annually, and $4.5 million in fish products, mainly salmon.

Common Market countries have an eight per cent tariff against salmon, but it is still entering Britain duty-free.

A department spokesman predicts, however, that the tariff will be "somewhere between duty-free and eight per cent," and a similar situation exists in negotiations over lead and zinc.

The spokesman suggests that only a small portion of future exports would benefit from the establishment of some duty-free quotas. An exception to this could be proposed tariffs on paper and paper products, excluding newsprint, since Common Market countries face forecast future shortages of forest products.

NAME EXEMPTIONS

The countries have already exempted newsprint and wood pulp, and have lowered the 13 per cent tariff on plywood.

Dressed lumber will face a five-per-cent duty.

Hart says that "the situation is very serious, but not hopeless."

Hart says he is reasonably optimistic about the future of trade and the tariffs, but warns "time is growing short" and trade negotiations must "repair the damage."

In British Columbia, hardest hit will be the Prince George Pulp and Paper Ltd. mill, producing about 107,000 tons of soft kraft a year. About 80 per cent of this production, worth more than $14 million, is exported to Britain.

The mill, jointly owned by Canadian Forest Products and the British multinational giant, Reed International, also produces 140,000 tons of market pulp a year.

About 300 employees are involved in the soft kraft production.

Company officials say alternative markets will have to be considered if the full weight of the tariffs is imposed.

U.S. SUPREME COURT THROWS OUT BIG AWARD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court threw out today a multi-million dollar judgment in favor of Trans World Airlines against industrialist Howard Hughes and the Hughes Tool Co.

An award of $138 million to TWA was originally ordered in 1963 by U.S. District Judge Charles M. Metzner of New York. Interest has been increasing the amount by about $900,000 a month.

Metzner entered the judgment when Hughes, who has not appeared in public for many years, failed to show up for the proceedings. The amount was said to be the largest single judgment ever awarded in a private case.

TWA sued for treble damages under the Clayton anti-monopoly law on grounds that Hughes Tool Co. (Toolco) illegally used its business with TWA to establish itself as a supplier to other airlines.

The complaint said TWA had suffered financially because under Toolco's dominance it had been prevented from acquiring an adequate jet fleet in the 1950s.

The majority opinion by Justice William O. Douglas said the transactions that TWA challenged as anti-trust violations were under the Civil Aeronautics board's jurisdiction and by law were immune from anti-trust action.

The suit, filed by TWA in 1961, named Hughes as a defendant but he could never be located to be legally served as a party to the case. Toolco, a corporation wholly owned by Hughes, and Raymond Holiday, a toolco vice-president and TWA director, were the other defendants.

At that time, Toolco had a 78 per cent interest in TWA's outstanding stock and until six months previously had acted as supplier and lessor of planes to the airline.

Toolco sold its TWA stock in 1966.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Metzner's ruling and raised the interest from 6 to 7½ per cent. The Supreme Court decision reversed both lower courts.

New Rules on Foreign Capital

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The federal government is preparing new legislation to screen foreign takeovers of Canadian businesses, Industry Minister Alstair Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday.

The new policy on foreign ownership will be tougher than that contained in a bill proposed by the government in the last Parliament, he said.

The legislation will propose a new type of screening agency under a senior official who will report directly to the minister.

The earlier bill, which died at dissolution, would have required investors to file plans with a registrar in the industry department.

Gillespie said the new bill would be followed by regulations of new foreign investment in co-operation with the provinces and by imposing a licence restriction on transfers of technology into Canada.

He told the House the government would not be rushed into dealing with the foreign ownership issue because of the importance of the issue and later he said it could be several years after establishment of the screening agency before the government starts regulating new investment from outside Canada.

The government indicated in the throne speech last week that a further measure will require the majority of directors of federally-incorporated companies to be Canadians.

Also in the Commons Wednesday, Wally Frith (NDP—Northwest Territories) demanded immediate settlement of aboriginal land claims.

Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who touched on the subject briefly during question period, later said the aboriginal rights controversy poses a difficult matter to decide.

In dealing with it, the government will respect "the rights of the Crown" as they apply to natives but will also take into account native treaty claims.

Frith issued a press release Wednesday saying he will ask the House on Friday to set up a special committee to investigate the matter.

Making his first speech of the session Wednesday,

Nixon Ends Most Curbs On Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon abolished mandatory wage-price controls today, except for the food and health industries, and established a self-administering system keyed to government economic standards.

The surprise move—far more sweeping than had been expected—came as Nixon asked Congress for a one-year extension of his authority to control wages and prices.

The president abolished the pay board and the price commission but retained the cost of living council to manage his Phase 3 economic system.

The new program, which immediately replaces the Phase 2 system established in November 1971, "is self-administering and based on voluntary compliance," the White House said.

No longer will large businesses and labor unions have to get prior government approval for wage or price increases—except in "special problem areas" which Nixon listed as food processing and retailing, and the health industry.

The president also continued the present system of looser mandatory controls over construction wage increases and said the present voluntary effort to keep interest rates down will stay in effect.

But for those industries and unions freed today from mandatory controls, the government retains the right to move in with stiff action to force back unreasonable increases.

Nixon said in a message to Congress that his goal is to reduce the inflation rate to 2.5 per cent or less by the end of 1973. He said his 90-day Phase 1 wage-price freeze and his Phase 2 mandatory controls had cut the inflation rate by nearly half—to about 3.5 per cent.

Nixon's new program abolishes rent controls and is intended to "allow reasonable flexibility" in wage and price increases, Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz told reporters.

Under Phase 3, a new labor-management advisory committee—with members including top industrialists and such labor leaders as the AFL-CIO's George Meany—will decide whether the current 5.5-per-cent ceiling on wage increases should be modified.

That standard remains in effect until the panel meets and the cost of living council decides whether to accept its recommendation.

As a general guide for Phase 3, the White House said price increases should not exceed increases in costs. "Even where costs have increased," a White House summary said, "prices should not be increased if the firm's profit margin exceeds the firm's base-period profit margin."

"Alternatively," the summary added, "a firm may increase prices to reflect increased cost without regard to its profit margin if the firm's average price increases would not exceed 1.5 per cent in a year."

BILL TO EXTEND HANGING BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to extend the partial ban on capital punishment for another five years was given first reading today in the Commons.

The bill, the first piece of legislation put before the new Parliament, may come up for debate Friday.

Logging Fish Kill Protested

They claimed neither the provincial nor federal government have done anything to stop logging companies from filling streams with debris.

About 40 fishermen, some with their families, from Tofino, Ucluelet and other Island points took part in the demonstration.

The group, called the Save Our Salmon Committee, brought in several trucks loaded with some of the debris collected from the up-Island streams, along with specimens of dead fish purported to have died in the struggle to make it upstream.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, acting in the absence of Resources Minister Bob Williams, came out of the buildings to speak to the demonstrators and arranged a meeting with resources and conservation officials.

The most graphic illustration of the mood of the fishermen was a cartoon painted on the side of a truck.

Also attending the meeting are Alberni MLA Robert Skelly and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst.

Hall said he agreed with the fishermen that the problem is "a very serious one." He pointed out that Williams is out of town on vacation, but said Williams was aware of the situation and was taking action on it.

Spokesman for the SOS committee, president Gerald Clarke, said Skelly had told the fishermen that a stop-cutting order had been obtained to keep the logging companies

BIG PENSION HIKE

OTTAWA (CP) — "A substantial increase of pensions to aged people will be announced soon," Health Minister Marc Lalonde promised in the Commons today.

The announcement appeared to boost the minority Liberal government's chances of maintaining New Democrat support.

Posties Talk

OTTAWA (CP) — Meetings between postal union and government negotiators resumed here today after a union vote that rejected proposals of the workers' national bargaining committee.

The postal workers rejected by 11,217 to 9,479 a negotiating committee recommendation to turn down contract proposals of a conciliation board report.

But the result of the vote, announced Wednsday was causing interpretation problems.

Some union leaders saw it as an expression of non-confidence in the bargaining committee, while others saw it as a motion of support for basic principles outlined in the conciliation report.

Bill Kidd, education director of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the national leaders did not see the vote against the committee recommendation as an expression of non-confidence.

Paris Talks Expand

PARIS (Reuter) — The Vietnam peace talks between United States presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese Politburo member L Duc Tho took on a new dimension today when they were joined by their technical experts working on a ceasefire arrangement.

It was the first time the experts had been present since Kissinger and Tho resumed their discussions last Monday.

Sullivan and Thach and their experts have held almost 50 hours of technical discussions since Jan. 2.

Meanwhile, United States planes kept up heavy raids on the North Vietnamese panhandle today while ground action tapered off in South Vietnam.

Most Pilots Said Against Bombing of the North

Times News Services

SAIGON — A B-52 commander who balked at bombing North Vietnam after his 175th mission said today "most pilots do not want to bomb targets in North Vietnam."

But there are some who do, says Capt. Michael Heck.

"One of the pilots made the statement he wanted to hit civilian targets because it made him feel good," says Heck, 30, of Chula Vista, Calif.

Heck said: That's the quote of the pilot but this is not typical of all the pilots. Most don't like what they are doing but they follow orders."

He said: "There is enough suffering just in South Vietnam to warrant a discontinuation of the war. But the massive bombing of the North might have been the last straw and I think the step that specifically pushed me over the brink.

"After the ceasefire for Christmas, the massive bombardments resumed and I decided I had to take the step. I reached the decision Dec. 26 and I went to see my wing commander and informed him of my decision. He advised me to seek legal assistance."

Heck, a 1964 alumnus of President Nixon's Quaker alma mater, Whittier College, could get two years in a military prison if a court martial convicts him of failure to obey a general order.

"I can live with that easier than I can with taking part in the war," he said.

A spokesman for the Strategic Air Coommand in Omaha, Neb., said Heck is "the first and only" B-52 crew member to face a charge of "alleged failure to obey an order to fly a combat mission in Southeast Asia."

Heck's decorations include the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with 10 Oak Leaf clusters and two Presidential Unit Citations.

Another Air Force captain who participated in the B-52 bombing missions has charged the Strategic Air Command with "stupidity and laxity' in planning the raids.

"Either by stupidity or sheer laziness, my crew bombed the same target on the first and third nights of the raids," using the same routes covered by enemy missiles, he said in a letter to Senator Charles Matthias Jr., (R-Md.), his home-state senator.

HECK

Matthias forwarded the letter to Senator John C. Stennis, (D-Miss.), chairman of the Senate armed services committee, saying it describes "a disturbing situation in which unnecessary risks were taken." Matthias asked for further investigation.

Matthias' office deleted the names of the captain, who was the plane's navigator, and a sergeant who also signed it.

U.S. Eyes More Canadian Fuel

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the U.S. Federal Power Commission predicted today steadily increasing oil and natural gas imports from Canada, but said the "primary efforts" of the U.S. should be aimed at expanding domestic production.

John Nassikas, an influential policy adviser, told the Senate interior committee on oil and gas imports that more domestic production could involve more intrusions on federal lands, changes in tax and pricing policies and "reappraisal" of federal environmental standards.

While Nassikas was making his forecast, many parts of the United States were still feeling the pinch of a shortage of fuel oil and heating gas.

Schools were closed in many areas, industrial employees were laid off, airline and bus services faced a threat of curtailment, and thermostats were lowered at some military bases.

On Wednesday a senior Nixon administration official told the Senate hearing that Canada and the U.S. have reached a "fair degree of understanding" on one of their major oil-import problems.

However, the official, Gen. George Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, gave no indication that a final agreement is near.

Lincoln said that a "series of meetings" was held between November, 1971, and December, 1972, to discuss President Nixon's proposals to lift import quotas on Canadian crude oil.

Nixon said the quotas now largely superseded because of the insatiable demand by U.S. refiners would be lifted if agreement could be reached on supplies for Eastern Canada in the event of an emergency.

Canada has generally taken the position that the two issues are not related and should not be linked.

Replying to questions from committee chairman Henry Jackson, Democratic senator from Washington, Lincoln said there had been "forthright and friendly discussions with Canada . . . and a fair degree of understanding."

But he did not amplify that statement and Canadian sources here said they could make no comment on the talks.

The hearings were held in an atmosphere of extraordinary interest, with 15 senators turning out under bright television lights and before a jam-packed public audience testimony that the growing U.S. energy shortage has finally become a "glamor" issue in American politics.

Nassikas told the committee today gas from Canada's Arctic islands "will be especially expensive and difficult to transport to the mainland."

Other factors likely to inhibit gas imports from Canada, Nassikas said, include Canadian policy protecting domestic needs, the rate of discovery of reserves and capital requirements for pipelines.

Nassikas, 55, a former utility lawyer who has been chairman of the powerful FPC for four years, and other members of that regulatory agency faced close questioning by committee members about natural-gas prices and the effect of freeing such prices from EPC controls.

In Calgary, R. P. Hooper, a senior adviser to Resources Canada said the rising demands of the United States and that country's desire for secure supplies will make development of the Athabasca oil sands more viable.

The higher demand would lead to spectacular increases in the prices of Canadian oil and increased United States interest in Canada's frontier areas.
